KUHS Highlights

By HAROLD McKAY

Again this year the seniors will have a class day to give out the special awards instead of dragging out the commencement ceremonies.

The date of the class day is not definitely known but it will be in the week between baccalaureate and commencement. On class day all the seniors sit on the stage in their caps and gowns while they receive their awards.

Parents and friends of the seniors are invited to the affair which will be held in the auditorium.

On the sports scene: The Pelican baseball team is in Eugene today for a double header with the Eugene Axemen and tomorrow they battle with the Oregon Duck-linges. The "B" track squad hosts the Medford "B" team in a relay meet this afternoon. The Pelican cinder squad journeys over the hill to Medford for the Rogue Valley Relays tomorrow. This will be the boys' second meet—they won their first meet, a triangle meet with Roseburg and Eugene. There is a possibility that Marshfield will have a team in the relays. As it now stands the teams entered are: Medford, Grants Pass, Ashland, Crater, Marshfield and Klamath.

Recently the Pelican service club elected their officers for next year. Shirley Davis receives the gavel of president from Dick Cullen. Lois Sastedt takes over Sue Bevens' tasks as vice president; Claudia Miller hands Anne Onstead her minute books as secretary-treasurer; and Dick Pastega becomes sergeant-at-arms replacing Bob Chidester.

YOU WILL WELCOME the young representatives of Camp Fire and Blue Bird Girls who start out bright and early Saturday morning with their boxes of high quality candy mints. Mrs. Jerry Olson, 1150 Pine, has a warm greeting for winning little salesgirls, Kathy Fleet, left, Blue Bird, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fleet; and Carroll Samson. Proceeds will be used to augment the Camp Fire budget, which was not reached in the Community Chest Drive, and the aim of the girls is to realize enough over the sum needed for the organization's operational expenses to finance needed improvements at Camp Esther Applegate at Lake O' the Woods. — Photo by Floyd at Underwoods

Coffee Break Abuses In Capitol Said Controlled

SALEM (AP)—Abuses of rest periods—or coffee time—by Oregon state employees has ceased to be a problem in most departments, state officials and employes say.

Commenting on reports that federal agencies have banned or curtailed "coffee breaks," Forrest Stewart, manager of the Oregon State Employees Association said the few complaints he received were directed at state employes on the supervisory level.

He explained there are no rules governing the rest periods of state workers, but department heads agree that the time out for coffee is necessary to maintain efficiency.

Sen. Howard C. Belton, Canby, who used to be the severest critic of the practice, said "the situation around the Capitol appears to have been greatly restricted from that of a few years ago."

Belton referred to a condition in the old State Office Buildings, where a snack bar on the main floor often gave visitors an erroneous impression that state employes drank coffee all the time. This snack bar has been moved to the fifth floor.

Secretary of State Earl T. Newbry, who runs the biggest department in the Capitol, said two 15-minute "breaks" a day had the approval of the State Board of Control, and that the privilege was being controlled satisfactorily.

"Each department head is charged with vigilance to prevent abuses," Newbury explained, "there are bound to be some, of course, but by close supervision, they can be kept at a minimum."

The governor's office said it had had no serious complaints, and assumed state employes aren't abusing the privilege.

A very unusual and interesting assembly was held in the auditorium this morning.

Dr. Elmo Stevenson, resident of Southern Oregon College of Education, introduced a student from India who is studying at Southern Oregon College of Education. The student, Miss Ivy Coffey, talked to G.H.S. students on India. She explained that only 20 per cent of India's population is literate and that there are six times as many illiterate boys as girls. She expressed India's hope that by 1960 they will have free and compulsory schooling.

Miss Coffey wore a sari, the native costume of India. The sari is a silk garment five yards long and 42 inches wide. It is wrapped around the body from one's ankles to a strip left hanging over the back.

Louise Dresser Still Has Ambitions In Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP)—"I've got to get married or get back in the picture business. I can't stand the loneliness."

This was the frank comment of Louise Dresser, one of the best-loved film stars of 20 years ago. She is most remembered for appearing opposite Will Rogers in "State Fair," "Lightnin'" and other films.

When I called at her Glendale home, she told me of the dramatic events in her life since she left the movies in 1937. Now 74 and still attractive, she spoke candidly of losing her career because producers thought she was deaf, and pouring her fortune into a racing stable that failed.

Back in the '30s, Miss Dresser was enjoying a successful film career. One day she picked up a local Sunday paper and read a story that changed her life.

A feature writer told how certain film figures had overcome handicaps. A comedian had lost most of the fingers of one hand; a director continued after losing an eye; a leading man got along with one leg. The story continued that Louise Dresser was a success although completely deaf.

"I couldn't believe it," said the actress. "I called the writer and asked how I could hear her on the phone if I were deaf. She shrugged it off. The damage was done. I knew I was through in pictures."

"What about her hearing?"

"My hearing hasn't changed since 1913. My ears were affected during a flu epidemic in New York. But I have always been able to hear anyone who talks distinctly."

"If I couldn't hear, how could I have done all those Broadway plays and made all those pictures, including seven with Will Rogers?"

Miss Dresser retired to her Glendale home with her husband, Jack Gardner, actor, agent and film executive. When Gardner was an official at Fox, studio head Winfield Sheehan gifted him with a thoroughbred horse. Gardner had once dabbled in racing and decided to try it again.

"We were out to give Calumet Farms competition," she recalled. "We failed miserably."

"We had a mare ready to go at Santa Anita, but the war broke out. Racing was over for the duration. Then we decided to get into the breeding business. When the war was over, we had a couple of 3-year-olds ready for racing. One of them started at Hollywood Park but made a poor showing. The disappointment was too much for my husband. He collapsed at the track."

"I know we have been criticized for losing our money on the stable, but I can't regret it. If it hadn't been horses, it might have been real estate or oil, or something. Anyway, it's gone."

Two years ago, Gardner died. It was the end of 43 happy years of marriage. The shock was hard for the actress to take.

"I had never been alone before," she remarked. "All my life I had someone to live with. These two years have been as much as I
