

Duke Denies Castle Sale

LONDON (AP) — The Duke of Windsor's London attorney flatly denied a report in the tabloid Daily Sketch Thursday that ex-King Farouk of Egypt is dickering to buy Windsor's "abdication home," Fort Belvedere.

Sir George Allen the attorney, said in a statement: "I am authorized to say there is not the slightest foundation for this story."

Windsor returned recently to the United States after attending the funeral of his mother, Queen Mary, at Windsor Castle.

A Buckingham Palace spokesman also denied the report and asserted that the Duke did not own Fort Belvedere. He said it is "owned by an account known as crown lands" and "belongs to the country."

It was from Fort Belvedere that the duke made his historic broadcast in 1936 telling the British people he was giving up the throne for "the woman I love," American divorcee Wallis Warfield Simpson.
