Mario Lanza's History In Film World Ups and Downs

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (P) — No star in Hollywood has ever had a stranger history than Mario Lanza.

In four short years, the musculat tenor has become a movie legend, and the legend grows every day. He is a study in extremes.

From poor beginnings in Philadelphia's tough neighborhoods, he rose to earn a million dollars in one year. After a couple of years of frantic, money-making activities, he tossed in his career and has done nothing for a year. He is the defendant in the biggest law suit ever brought by a studio against a star; MGM is suing him for more than 14 million dollars.

He was a hearty extrovert when he arrived here. But in the past eight months, he has spent most of the time within his Beverly Hills home, refusing to see the press and most of his friends.

Even his weight hits amazing highs and lows. Last year he ate himself up to a bloated 220 pounds, then trimmed down to a hard 165. He is reported above 200 again.

What is the reason for his unusual behavior? Even his close friends aren't sure. They blame it on his sudden fame, his disillusionment with false friends, his natural Italian temperament. But when they figure they've got him pegged, he does something new to upset their theories.

Life with Lanza has never been dull. He arrived in Hollywood as young man. Unlike most others who have hit the town, he had something to promote: a tenor voice with signs of greatness.

Producer Joe Pasternak put him in two pictures with Kathryn Grayson. Lanza walked confidently through them, but his outspoken manner created a feud with Miss Grayson. Then came his biggest hit, "The Great Caruso."

His big troubles with the studio started with his next film, "Because You're Mine." Lanza thought the picture wasn't good enough. When the film was ready to start, he turned up 50 pounds overweight. This caused months of delays and hassles, which were finally ironed out. Lanza did the picture, but he wasn't happy with it.

Then came "The Student Prince." Lanza was having financial troubles at the time. He also reportedly disagreed over the music in the film and tiffed with the director. He recorded the songs for the picture, but he didn't show up when it came time to shoot it.

All heck broke loose. After weeks of waiting, MGM paid off Ann Blyth and others signed for the film and suspended it. The studio claimed $855,000 had been lost and sued Lanza for 4½ million dollars which included predicted profits on the film.

Months later, the tenor indicated he might come back to work. But negotiations fell through. He was fired from the studio. Boss Dore Schary said: "Lanza has been shown every consideration. 'The Student Prince' has been scheduled and rescheduled."

The suit's ante was raised to more than 14 million. Harry Gershon of the MGM attorneys, Loeb and Loeb, says the new figure includes probable profits from three other films which had been owed by Lanza.

Lanza's attorney, Robert Kopp, says the suit will be fought by a denial of MGM's allegations. The tenor's only public comment has been that "at the proper time and before the proper forum, all of the details will be revealed." He predicted, "The decision will be in my favor."

Now that Lanza has been fired by MGM, he is free for other jobs. His agents, MCA, report that he is besieged with offers. Among the best possibilities are a radio show and a film version of "The Vagabond King" at Paramount. No TV is planned at present.

"His first dates will be some concert engagements in July," says agent Harry Freidmen. "Mario will take eight or nine weeks to prepare for them."

Joe Pasternak, who produced all of Lanza's pictures, says he "feels like a father whose child has gone wrong." He is going ahead with "The Student Prince." Vic Damone has been testing and will probably play Lanza's role.

Asked for comment on Pasternak's words, Kopp declared, "The relationship is apt. But Mario feels like a son whose father has gone wrong."

Fluorides To Be Discussion Topic

PORTLAND (P) — Fluoridation of drinking water is one of the topics scheduled for discussion at the 50th annual Oregon Public Health Association Friday.

An award will be made during the conference to the person selected as having made the outstanding contribution to public health in the state.

Among scheduled speakers is Madeline Pershing, Washington, D. C., of the U. S. Public Health Service.

Top Court Rule Vetoes Vote Plan

WASHINGTON (P) — The Supreme Court Monday struck down an election plan which it said illegally denied Negroes an effective voice in picking Democratic candidates in Fort Bend County, Texas.

The court's action was taken on an appeal by a group of Negroes protesting against primaries conducted by the Jaybird Democratic Association.

The association has conducted unofficial primaries for the nomination of county and precinct officers since 1889. Association membership is restricted to white persons.

The high tribunal told the Federal District Court in Texas to hold hearings to determine what can be done to protect Negroes in Fort Bend County from future discriminatory practices.

In other actions Monday, the Supreme Court:

Upheld 5-3 Tennessee's right to tax the Esso Standard Oil Co. more than 4 million dollars on its business of storing government-owned gasoline during World War II. The government will have to pay the tax under terms of the storage contract.

Denied gambler Mickey Cohen of Los Angeles a review of his conviction on federal tax evasion charges.

CAA Sets Up New Regions

WASHINGTON (P) — F. B. Lee, Civil Aeronautics Administration chief, disclosed Monday that seven domestic CAA regions are to be consolidated into four regions by June 30. He said greater efficiency and the saving of an estimated one and one half million dollars were the reasons.

Lee said Region Seven, which includes the four Pacific Northwest states, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, would be consolidated with a new Region Four, with headquarters at Los Angeles.

Region Four would embrace Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Montana, Utah, New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada, Colorado and Wyoming.

He said the present Seattle offices which are the headquarters for Region Seven would be retained as the CAA's point of contact with the public in the Pacific Northwest. There are some 1,050 persons employed by the present seventh region. It was not disclosed if any would be cut from the payroll under the new plan.

Dynamite Blast Kills Worker

DALLAS (P) — Exploding dynamite shattered a concrete warehouse Monday, causing one death and five injuries.

The dead man was Alfred E. Lunch, 39. Witnesses said he apparently was blown from the building and then run over by a gasoline truck whose driver was speeding past the erupting warehouse.

Falling Tree Fatal For Logger

OAKRIDGE, Ore. (P) — Part of a falling tree struck Kenneth A. Cox, 34, in the head Monday, fatally injuring him.

Cox, who lived at Jasper, had been flagging cars for a logging operation. A tree cut by other loggers fell on a smaller tree, breaking it. A piece of the smaller tree fell on Cox.

The widow and two small sons survive.

BIDS

PORTLAND (P) — Bids will be opened by the Corps of Engineers May 21 on a South Santiam River bank protection and channel improvement project.
