Richard Whiting's Life Story To Be Real McCoy

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Here's one song writer whose film biography will be the real McCoy—Richard Whiting.

Or so says songstress Margaret Whiting, the late composer's daughter. In discussing plans to film his life story, she said the picture would avoid the pitfalls of other musical biographies.

"None of them has been true to life," she remarked. "None has presented the real picture of what the song writers were like. I know, because I knew them all through my father."

The Gus Kahn biography, "I'll See You in My Dreams," failed to capture his humorous nature, she said, even though comic Danny Thomas played the role. Nor did "Words and Music" do right by Richard Rodgers and Larry Hart, she added.

"Larry was a wonderful character with their careers," she commented. "But in the picture he was played as just another Mickey Rooney role."

She claimed that the Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby biog, "Three Little Words," misfired and so did the Jerome Kern epic, "Till the Clouds Roll By." As for the picture of George Gershwin in "Rhapsody in Blue"—"they didn't show him as he was, a man with driving ambition; instead, they threw in some romances that never happened."

Perhaps the most fanciful was the Cole Porter film, "Night and Day." The composer was born a millionaire and made many millions more. The studio was hard put to inject conflict in his story.

"Ang nobody can tell me that Cole Porter wrote 'Night and Day' in a tent," Miss Whiting added.

She is now helping screen writers with the script of her father's life. She said they will stick to the facts.

"So many dramatic things happened in his life that we don't have to fabricate," she commented. "He liked to keep the common touch. Even after he had written songs that sold millions, he still played the piano in his publisher's office in Detroit. One day a young fellow came into the office looking for encouragement. My father liked his songs and helped him get ahead. The fellow's name was George Gershwin."

The story has a good romance too, she said. Her father originally fell for her Aunt Margaret, a singer. He was expecting to meet her at a train, but the singer's sister stepped off instead. That started his life-long romance.

The script, which is now called "My Ideal," will be directed by Roy Rowland, and talks are now under way for a deal with Warner Brothers. It would be a musical feast, since Whiting penned such songs as "Beyond the Blue Horizon," "Louise," "Sleepy Time Gal," "Too Marvelous for Words," and "Ain't We Got Fun?"

Present plans call for Margaret to play her Aunt Margaret—the one who sang—and her sister Barbara to portray the composer's wife. Sound confusing? That isn't all.

The Whiting's also plan a TV film show in which Margaret and Barbara will play themselves. It will be the story of their own lives, and their mother and Aunt Margaret will also be portrayed.
