It's Illegal To Keep Ball, Judge Rules
 ANDERSON, S.C. (AP) - A case of importance to every baseball fan - is he entitled to keep a foul ball hit into the stands? - was decided in Municipal Court here Tuesday.
 Hoyt Fuller was charged with "larceny of a baseball," President A. P. Durham of the Anderson Baseball Association said. Fuller refused to return a foul ball hit into the bleachers at Hardin Field during a Tri-State League game. City Recorder (Judge) Harper Welborn found Fuller guilty. He suspended a $17 fine when Fuller gave up the ball.
 Welborn ruled that a ball knocked into the stands or over the fence remains the property of the owner. He said a ball club is not obligated to reward anyone for returning a baseball from the stands. But the judge added he thinks the old custom of giving free admission to anyone turning in a ball fouled outside the park is a good one.

LET'S GROW FLOWERS
 Our club has progressed very well in the past weeks and everybody is very excited about their flowers that are coming up. All the kids are very enthusiastic about the club and everybody is cooperating very well. We have fourteen members, nearly all of them are pretty young, but are starting out very well for their first year in flowers. Our club leader, Mrs. Stroberg, is giving us good advice and encouragement.

Agar, Rebuilding Career, - 'I Am Not An Alcoholic'
 By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP) - "I am not an alcoholic. I am not a drunkard. I never have been."
 These were blunt words from John Agar, who is earnestly trying to rebuild his personal life and movie career. Both suffered severe setbacks because of his arrests on drunk driving charges. Having served time for his offenses, he says he is determined to stay out of future trouble.
 "I made a couple of mistakes," he admitted. "I've paid for them. Now I want to forget them."
 He spoke frankly about his past problems and future hopes. Does he drink now?
 "No," he replied. "And I don't miss it at all." He attends regular meetings of Alcoholics Anonymous, in accordance with court order.
 Agar indicated that he never was more than a social drinker, although he has gone overboard on some well-publicized occasions. He said that some people got the idea he was a drunkard because of his eyes. "They are perennially bloodshot."
 "It's a condition that started when I was in the Army," he explained. "I've had 160 different allergy tests to find out what causes it. Nobody has been able to determine.
 "Possibly it is caused by dust. When I first got into the Army, I was a physical instructor up in Washington and spent hours on big, dusty fields. Then I got into the engineers and went to bulldozer school. After a day of training, my face would be caked with dust."
 Agar is a Johnny-come-lately to the acting profession. Son of a meat packer, he expected to enter his father's business. That was before the war and before his ill-fated marriage to Shirley Temple. Her boss, David Selznick, decided Agar could be an actor and gave him a start in the movies.
 Does he ever regret having become an actor?
 "Not for a minute."
 "But he might have avoided a lot of trouble if he hadn't, I suggested.
 "I also would have missed a lot of pleasure. What happened to me could have happened to anybody, whether he was an actor or not. The only difference is that when it happens to an actor, everybody reads about it."
 Agar's career is getting back on its feet with the aid and support of his wife Loretta and his mentor, producer Hal Makell. The latter made "Man of Conflict" with the actor at the height of his troubles. The producer took Agar under his wing and is promoting a career before and behind the camera. Agar is learning all phases of film production.

 "I'm in this business to stay," said the actor, "and I want to learn about the production end as well as acting. My ambition is to become a character lead, which is the ambition of any actor." He allowed that he couldn't go on playing the all-American boy forever.
 Agar's film career got a boost with a lead in Hugo Haas' "Ball." He is now being sought by Pine-Thomas, Alex Gottlieb and other producers. Also in the wind is a nitery date in Las Vegas. He has been taking vocal lessons for years and thinks he is ready for his night club debut.
