Mexico Appears Uneasy About Ike Administration's Policies

MEXICO CITY (AP)—There's a chill in the air despite the summer heat south of the border.

Relations between officials of the United States and Mexican governments have been cooling definitely of late, although no one in authority will explain why.

But Mexicans regarded as anti-American have been receiving good government jobs, and even newspapers ordinarily friendly to Mexico's northern neighbor have turned critical.

Part of the new coldness is explained by some as due to the Mexican uneasiness over the Latin American policies of the new administration in Washington.

However, Washington recently agreed to an extension of the peso stabilization agreement. It also increased the amount Mexico could borrow from the United States from 50 to 75 million dollars. The agreement provides that if the value of the peso goes down, Mexico can borrow from the United States to support it.

The Simpson bills, which would have increased U. S. import duties on lead, zinc and oil sold by Mexico, also were viewed with suspicion. Voting down of the first didn't help much. Carlos DeNegri, a usually-friendly columnist, labeled the second "hateful and cynical".

President Adolfo Ruiz Cortines, who took office last Dec. 1, has been known as a friend of the United States. But his contacts with American news correspondents, while cordial, have been infrequent.

One theory held by some observers is that an incident during his presidential campaign may account for his attitude. Opponents charged he had worked for the U. S. Army during the American occupation of his native Vera Cruz in 1914.

The President produced evidence to refute the charges. But the theory is that he made such a strong impression on him that he is leaning over backward to show no partiality to North Americans.

Mexico's refusal to follow the advice of Mexican and U. S. technicians in fighting the interest outbreak of hoof and mouth disease is only one sign of impaired relations.

The two countries carried out a joint five year campaign against the cattle plague, ending in 1951. When the infection broke out again this year the joint commission which had directed the previous campaign was pushed aside. Instead, the minister of agriculture imposed measures which the U. S. regards as half-hearted.

Negotiations over new visa regulations affecting Mexican migrant harvest hands coming to the United States for work have dragged on for months without results.

These arguments between top level authorities of the two countries are having little effect on the Mexican in the street, however. Proof of this can be seen in the crowds of farmers waiting in provincial Mexican towns in hope they will be recruited for migrant harvest labor in the United States.

Rubber Plant Sale Bill Signed

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower Friday signed a bill setting up a three-member man commission to sell to private industry the government's synthetic rubber plants, built at a cost of 518 million dollars during World War II.

The measure, hemmed with anti-monopoly safeguards, gives the commission until Jan. 1, 1955, to receive bids and negotiate sales contracts.

Congress then has 30 days to review all terms of sale. It can veto sales if it finds they do not give the taxpayer an adequate return.

The plants were built during the early part of World War II when Far Eastern rubber markets were cut off. They now are given a book value of 167 million dollars.

Sen. Ives Sees GOP Chances On Civil Rights As Better

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Lehman (D, Lib-NY) said today the record of the Republican-controlled 83rd Congress in the session just completed was a total blank on civil rights legislation.

But Sen. Ives (R-NY), in a separate interview, said he is convinced the Republicans have a better chance of enacting civil rights legislation than the Democrats.

Lehman said that, of more than a dozen civil rights bills introduced in the Senate this year, not a single one even got so far as a committee hearing.

In recent Democratic Congresses, he said, Senate committees not only held hearings on such measures but reported them to the floor. Some of these were called up for debate but never passed, largely because of Southern Democratic opposition which used lengthy speeches to block them.

The New York Democrat emphasized that former President Truman often spoke out for civil rights bills. But the White House this year provided Congress no leadership on the issue, Lehman said, adding: "They just sat on their hands."

President Eisenhower, in his nationwide radio report on his administration and Congress, asserted last night, without elaboration: "We have used the power of the federal government, wherever it clearly extends, to combat and erase racial discrimination and segregation—so that no man of any color or creed will ever be able to cry, 'This is not a free land.'"

This appeared to be a re-statement of Eisenhower's previously expressed view that there should be no racial segregation, but that the states should handle their own problems except in cases falling under federal jurisdiction.

Eisenhower's administration recently banned racial segregation in schools on U. S. military reservations. The Justice Department is taking a hand in several segregation suits now before the Supreme Court.

Ives was one of 18 prominent Eastern Republicans who signed a statement last August declaring that a GOP victory in November would hasten enactment of a civil rights program.

As to this contention Lehman commented "It certainly did not

Council Upholds Medford's Chief

MEDFORD (AP)—A grand jury recommendation that Clotous McCredie, police chief here for 24 continuous years, be fired was turned down unanimously by the Medford City Council Thursday.

The Council refused, however, by a 5-3 vote to pass a resolution criticizing the grand jury and the Medford Mail Tribune. The resolution charged the newspaper with overplaying the grand jury report and making irresponsible accusations against McCredie.

Three Boys Held For Eureka Police

Three minors were held by the sheriff's office Friday for alleged complicity in a Eureka, Calif., store burglary.

One of the suspects is Zane Mingo 18. Names of two younger boys were withheld.

According to Sheriff Murray Britton, the boys are accused of stealing a large quantity of food and cigars from the Eureka store and then fleeing to Klamath Falls. Eureka police are on their way to take the youths into custody.

V-2's Inventor Sees Space Trips In 10-15 Years

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP)—The chief designer of Nazi Germany's V-2 rocket said Friday a permanent space station with a human crew could begin to circle the earth within 10 or 15 years.

Dr. Werner Von Braun, head of the German wartime rocket research station at Peenemuende, told the International Astronautics Congress here that the realization of the project required only a "coordinated space program" by the Western Powers.

Dr. Braun is at present engaged in secret military research for the United States. His lecture was read for him by Frederick C. Durant, of Alexandria, Va., newly elected president of the International Astronautic Federation.

Piped Oxygen Saves Dirt-Buried Man

CLEVELAND (AP)—A cave-in buried a man for 10 minutes under five feet of dirt here yesterday, but he survived because quick-thinking rescuers piped oxygen to him.

The walls of a 12-foot deep sewer ditch collapsed and buried Wellington Wilson, 41, a workman.

Fellow workmen dug a hole to Wilson's mouth and Dr. Stephen Sheppard of nearby Bay View Hospital piped oxygen to him as the others dug him free.

Wilson was taken to the hospital in serious condition.
