Multi-Language Judge Resorts To His Fingers

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—This defendant is deaf and dumb, your honor," the arresting officer told Traffic Judge Jim Demopolos. Judge Demopolos, who speaks a smattering of several languages, promptly asked the man, in labored sign language: "Guilty or not guilty?" Grinning at the judge's efforts, the defendant fingered back, "What does the officer say I did?" Applied of the charge of running a red light and the $10 fine, he pleaded guilty, paid the fine and flashed Demopolos a parting "Thank you" as he walked out of the courtroom.

"King" Gheorghe Gheorghiu-Dej, Western diplomats here say the new Communist court has bled Romania as much as the old monarchy. The lot of the city dweller has been lowered and the peasant reduced to a state serfdom comparable with the slavery of the Doyars.

But where the late King Carol fascinated his people with romantic perambulations and political conspiracies, handsome Gheorghiu-Dej lives in human isolation and rules with an iron fist.

Dej's Communist courtiers live in the homes of the former aristocracy and keep themselves in splendor while Romania's long-suffering 16 million people continue in hunger.

Their homes in Chaussee Kiselef and in Jianu Park are closely guarded by armed police. Big expensive American and Russian cars take their uniformed servants to and from private stores.

While millions of "common people" daily rise at 4 a.m. to queue up for the barest rations, crates of imported oranges and eggs are unloaded in the gardens of the new Communist rich.

Only Communist bigwigs or high foreign Communist guests use the ultramodern Banescu Railway Station, with its red carpets, which Carol built for the exclusive use of royalty.

The masses must wait if one of Romania's top Communist officials wants quick service in a department store or needs a rail ticket. We saw the people look at Communist bureaucrats receiving preferential treatment with the same hate they might have shown for royal agents.

The class distinctions of the new "classless society" are as strict for Romania's 700,000 Communist party members as they were in Victorian England.

At official receptions, Gheorghiu-Dej and his top guests are separated in private rooms and nobody may cross the line. They are served caviar and imported French brandy. The lower ranks get hors d'oeuvres and domestic tsuika.

Invited to Western receptions, the "new rich" of Romania leave their wives behind. It is said they do not know how to behave in society.

As in the 18th century, Turkish-appointed Greek governors of Romania were carried from their tables to their beds, so Gheorghiu-Dej has an escort of police thugs, who, by their number, almost lift him from place to place.

All traffic stops as Dej speeds through town in a convoy of curtained black sedans.

With the growth of this new exclusive society, Western diplomats say Romania's workers in general have seen a drop in their living standards below what they were during Carol's regime. Only a few faithful Communist workers are said to have gained.

For three years, the supply of food has declined steadily. It reached its peak shortage in May and June. Westerners say there were block-long lines of housewives seeking food from dawn until night.

The bare basic ration of 250 grams of black or grey bread a day, 200 grams of meat a week and small quantities of sugar and sunflower oil for cooking were met. That was all. There was no butter and little bread off ration and only the smallest quantities of vegetables.

A few weeks before the "Fourth World Festival of Youth" brought thousands of Westerners here to see the Communist "paradise," Romania's food situation improved.

While bread appeared as the regime dipped into its reserves to feed its guests lavishly and to give the appearance of plenty.

Westerners in Bucharest predicted the same chronic food shortages would reappear as soon as the festival visitors departed.

'Progressive' Weds Chinese Girl, Stays

FREEDOM VILLAGE, Korea (AP)—An American who decided to stay with the Communists, married a Chinese girl during his captivity, a returning soldier said today.

Sgt. Roy Story, 31, of Jonesboro, Tenn., said the American left his company in Camp 1 about four months ago.

"We heard he moved into Chong-sung to live with her," he said, "and then planned to go into China when the war was over."

Story did not know how the prisoner met the girl but speculated that "she had been a worker in the camp and met him after he turned progressive."

LOVE OVER-CHARGES

NEWPORT, Shropshire, England. (AP)—A store accused of charging more than the ceiling price for an order of bacon gave love as its excuse in court Tuesday.

Defense counsel B.J. Hayes told the judge: "The boy clerk and girl clerk who made up the order did not have their minds on their work. They were married a month later."

Alaska Meet In 2nd Day

JUNEAU (AP)—A Senate inter-committee group opened the second phase of its "on the road" statehood hearing here Tuesday after statehood supporters outnumbered the opponents in testimony at Ketchikan Monday.

The committee is headed by Sen. Butler (R-Neb.), long-time opponent of immediate statehood who issued a statement that he has come to Alaska with an open mind on the issue but wants a close study of the financial problems.

Witnesses who testified at Ketchikan against "statehood now" said they favored it after the territory gains more new industries.

Editor Emory F. Tobin of the Alaska Sportsman magazine said he feared the cost of statehood reflected by taxes would deter new industries. Sen. Jackson (D-Wash.) responded that the record showed no industries came to Alaska during the period of few taxes and since Alaska has no property tax, new industries would pay chiefly on profits, as they would in the states.

Supporters of statehood said chances for Alaska joining the union are being threatened by mismanagement of resources, such as fisheries which are fast being depleted. Several declared land control through statehood is the only way to save them.
