Deputy Sheriff Shot To Death

SONORA, Calif. (AP) — A deputy sheriff was shot to death at a nearby mountain town Friday night and four armed officers smoked the half-dressed gunman out of his cabin, Sheriff Donald Vars said.

Deputy sheriff-constable Jack Rickers, about 60, was killed by three bullets as he approached Celestino "Sam" Alvarez, a 65-year-old lumber piler who had been firing his 38 revolver into the ceiling of a tavern, Vars said.

The western-style slaying occurred in an alley back of the post office at Tuolumne City, in the mountains about 12 miles east of Sonora.

Constable Jack Newcombe, who saw Alvarez go to his cabin, summoned the sheriff and two armed deputies. They surrounded the place and called for Alvarez to come out, but heard no sound.

After tossing in a tear gas bomb, they broke in and found the lumberman wrapped in a blanket trying to escape the fumes. He submitted meekly to arrest and was booked for investigation of murder.

The sheriff said Alvarez spent the early evening drinking in a bar, then started firing his pistol.

Indian Story (Continued from Page One) E. J. Diehl, superintendent of the Klamath reservation, took the witness stand Friday afternoon and produced records showing that the witness operated on the reservation from Nov. 23, 1899, to Oct. 17, 1901. These records, according to Diehl, handled all types of criminal cases.

Under questioning by Defense Counsel O'Neill, Diehl also described the working of the Klamath Tribal General Council.

"Has there been any discussion at meetings of the tribal council concerning possible revival of the tribal courts?" O'Neill asked.

Diehl replied that there has been such discussions at various meetings of the council.

The Indian superintendent also explained that the tribal council is the legislative body of the reservation.

In answer to another question by Attorney O'Neill, Supt. Diehl said he had not received any orders changing reservation policies since Public Law 280 went into effect Aug. 15 and eliminated federal jurisdiction over 10 major crimes on the reservation.

With reference to present policing of the reservation, the superintendent explained that field agents are employed by the government and paid with tribal funds.

He added that these men are employed under provisions of the Indian constitution which also adopted ordinances to insure law and order on the reservation. He also explained that the ordinances are not being enforced because there is no tribal court in operation.

When asked by Attorney O'Neill if any ordinance has been passed since he became reservation superintendent, Diehl said only one covering fish and game.

Answering another question by state's assistant attorney general, Diehl said that when an Indian officer apprehends a law violator an attempt is made to have him prosecuted in state or county courts. He said cases are brought before a justice of the peace in Chiloquie.

"I'm surprised the defendants haven't appealed their cases," Judge Vandenberg commented.

Through testimony also given Friday afternoon by Vera Chase, official stenographer for the tribal council, District Attorney Alderson was able to have admitted as evidence transcripts of council meetings. These records are supposed to contain details of action taken by the council in an effort to obtain state jurisdiction for the reservation.

Prince Charles' Party Postponed 'Til Monday

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles, chubbly - faced heir to Britain's throne, had his fifth birthday today without a party, without a birthday cake and without parents to wish him happy returns.

Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh—who so far have spent only one birthday with their son—were set to have a happy family time together this time but suddenly changed their plans.

They decided instead to spend a quiet weekend at their country estate at Sandringham, resting before the start Nov. 23 of their grueling six-month tour to Australia and New Zealand.

Charles and his flaxen-haired sister, Princess Anne, were sent to spend the weekend at the royal lodge in Windsor with "Grandma" — Queen Mother Elizabeth—instead of romping around Buckingham Palace with friends invited to a royal party.

There was a small tea party at the lodge today—but it wasn't the real thing. That will have to wait until Monday when the Queen and the Duke return from Sandringham.

Then the birthday of the prince with the sunny smile will be celebrated in earnest with a few select friends—children of the palace staff.

Charles had a few presents to open this morning but most of them have been held up until Monday. Tops among them undoubtedly will be a little boy's dream automobile from his parents.

It's a spanking red limousine with an electric motor and all the controls of a real auto. It was specially built to the Duke's specifications.

Fog Terminates Game at Half

HAZLETON, Pa. (AP) — Fog forced postponement of a high school football game between Hazleton and Pottsville last night at the end of the first half.

Pottsville, leading 9-6, will come back here Monday to finish the game.

The contest began with good visibility, but heavy fog rolled in at halftime and obscured everything on the field.

Fish Dealer Convicted

THE DALLES (AP) — Myrl A. Rowley of Yakima Friday was convicted by a justice court jury here of illegally possessing salmon during the closed season.

Rowley, a fish buyer, was arrested last September one hour before the end of the summer closed season. The fish had been caught by Indians, who under ancient treaties, are permitted to fish for their own use at any time.

Rowley told newsmen shortly after his arrest that he had put the fish in "commercial channels" the day after the closed season ended.

He contended at his trial, however, that when he was arrested he was just storing the salmon for the Indians and therefore didn't actually have possession of the fish.

Immediately after the jury found Rowley guilty, his attorney, William Dick, said he would appeal to the Wasco County Circuit Court.

W. Germany Has 14 Pro-Red Newspapers

By TOM STONE FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Thirteen daily newspapers and a big weekly publish Communist propaganda in West Germany.

The Allied High Commission does not consider their efforts really damaging. An American Public Affairs officer said today the Communist reading audience is small —200,000 at the most—and the daily doses of propaganda have "only a mild effect."

"The Communist papers used to be hell raisers," he said, "but they aren't any more. Communism has been slipping steadily in West Germany since the peak days of 1946-48. The Sept. 6 elections are proof. The Communists got only two per cent of the total vote."

The last time the Communist press "really got out of hand" was soon after the start of the Korean War in 1950, the official told a reporter.

"They started printing the worst kind of stuff. They called General MacArthur 'The Butcher of Korea' and they said our GIs were committing atrocious crimes."

The papers then were padlocked one by one by the Allies for three-month periods. Afterwards, they were tamer with only scattered outbursts.

The Communist press has almost no visible means of support. Revenue from circulation and advertisements does not cover production costs. The papers are in the red, more ways than one. They are subsidized from the Soviet zone.

The editors are leading but low-paid functionaries. Their jobs are considered regular party duties. They must be able to turn every item into a Communist-slanted editorial, and see support for communism where none exists.

Almost any Communist can write for the party papers—without pay, of course. "People's correspondents" send in reports on beer hall brawls, rumors of any kind and especially incidents reflecting on the Allies.

Four of the papers are named "Echo."
