

Wolf Killing Farm Wife Polishes Off Fourth Kill

LIND RIVER, Ont. (AP)—North Ontario's champion wolf killer, a grandmother who is eagerly waiting the day she can hack another notch in her rifle.

Roy Beharrel now is looking for wolf No. 5.

"I'm just now beginning to get and enjoy life," says the sharp-shooting farm wife.

Down throughout this northern Ontario countryside for her prowess in killing wolves, she doesn't hunt for them. They seem to come to her, with fatal results.

The Canadian Tourist Assn. presented her with a wolf killer's badge after her third wolf kill last October. She is one of the few women so honored.

She shot her fourth wolf as it attempted to prey on the Beharrel sheep flock.

"I never shot anything bigger than groundhogs and squirrels before the wolves," she says.

She first learned to shoot as a girl of 10 and bagged her first wolf in 1951.

Her second wolf, shot in 1953, gave her a "real scare". Her young adopted son Wayne called out he could not shoot the big gray "dog" off the road. She looked out and saw a wolf with the child. Grabbing her 30-30 rifle, she felled it with one shot, then dragged it into the house. The wolf, revived by the warm kitchen, began growling and snapping. In sheer panic, Mrs. Beharrel grabbed a hooky stick and clubbed it to death.

The Beharrels live on a 160-acre farm near here. They have about 70 sheep and with a purebred ewe costing $75, three wolves must be shot at the present bounty of $25 to pay for the loss of one ewe.

Hungry wolves have played havoc with their flock.

"The few I have killed do not cover our losses," Mrs. Beharrel said.

Shepherd Dies Alone At 101

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP)—Ten years ago Jacques Claude Celestin left the hills where he had herded sheep for more than 50 years and said he was retiring. "Getting too old," he said.

With no surviving relatives, he settled down quietly in his one-room cabin near here. He was found there Saturday, dead apparently of natural causes.

Death came one week and one day after his 101st birthday, when he remarked the "only good thing on me is my appetite."

His Skiing Can Be A Dangerous Occupation

ALT LAKE CITY (AP)—Former J. Dell Kingston was a paratrooper in World War II, and he hit the silk over Korea.

Several years ago he fell into bread-kneading machine and manufacturers of the device said was the only man ever to be being crushed to death in the machine.

During airborne maneuvers near Kyushu, Japan, on Feb. 26, he dove into a river and was entangled in his chute.

But Army officers who Saturday sent him a citation for the rescue found him in a hospital, leg in a huge cast.

"Skiing," he commented, "that's serious."

He is the 27-year-old ex-corporal carried from a mountain at Alt Lake, Utah, a week ago with a double fracture of the ankle and broken leg bone.

Watch Kept On Astoria Hills

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP)—A close watch was kept today on a skidding hillside in this Oregon coastal town.

Thirty-four families have had to leave their homes on the water-soaked hill since it began slipping last Tuesday. City officials said they feared the slide area was spreading.

The Red Cross has designated the hillside a disaster area and Gov. Paul Patterson has ordered an investigation to determine if federal aid should be requested.

Handcuffs Cause Youth A Bad Time

BOSTON (AP)—A pair of handcuffs Robert Perry, 25, found in the street yesterday caused him to spend an unpleasant Sunday afternoon in a police station.

He tried them on and couldn't get them off. None of the keys at the South End police station would fit. Neither would about 100 keys sent over from Suffolk County Jail and from the armed services patrol.

A police sergeant finally filed down a screw driver and picked the handcuffs lock.
