Anne Francis Giving Out Sage Advice At Young 23

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—At the ripe old age of 23, Anne Francis is handing out this advice to younger actresses: don't lose your glamor.

Despite her tender years, Anne is an acting veteran. Born in Ossining, N. Y., she started as a fashion model before she was 5. She was in radio at 7, TV at 12 and was signed by MGM when she was 15. After appearing in only one picture, "Summer Holiday," she returned to New York. Then came appearances in summer stock and all the top TV dramatic shows, plus a movie, "So Young, So Bad."

Hollywood again called her, this time for a 20th Century-Fox contract. Great things were planned for her. She got the title role in "Lydia Bailey," a big costume drama. Then she got lost in the shuffle on the big lot. Now she is winding up her contract with a loanout to RKO for "Susan Slept Here."

In her three years at 20th-Fox, she made only three pictures, and those in the first year, I asked her what happened.

"I think the thing that did it was a role I did in 'Dream Boat,'" she remarked. "I played Clifton Webb's daughter, and the character was a female Webb. Throughout most of the picture, she was a dull girl who wore glasses and lacked glamor.

"The picture was fun to do, but I don't thing it was good for me. I think all the producers and directors on the lot considered me as sort of a character type of actress after that. I wasn't given any roles.

"If I had to do it over again, I probably would turn down the picture. It's different for someone who is established—like Elizabeth Taylor—to do such a role. The public is familiar with what she is like ordinarily. But I was a new personality, and people figured that was the kind of girl I was."

That was her last picture on the lot. She was loaned out to appear with James Cagney in "A Lion Is in the Streets" and recently did "The Kid From Outer Space" for Panoramic, the subsidiary that makes flat-screen pictures for 20th-Fox. After her present loanout, she becomes a free-lancer.

Most players leave studios with the statement that the separation was by mutual consent. Anne is frank enough to admit that she is being dropped.

Italy Still Faces Crisis

ROME (AP) — Amintore Fanfani, 46-year-old left wing leader of the Christian Democratic party, agreed Tuesday to try to form a new Italian government.

He "conditionally" accepted President Luigi Einaudi's offer of the Premiership after former Premier Giuseppe Pella, who resigned Jan. 5, turned it down.

Press and political observers had generally agreed Einaudi would ask Fanfani to attempt to end the week-long political crisis.

He had served as agriculture minister under Alcide de Gasperi and as interior minister in Pella's five-month-old government. In the former post, he played a major part in the implementation of the land reform program under which Italy plans to distribute nearly two million acres to 150,000 peasant families.

Pella resigned last week after a split with other Christian Democrat leaders who felt the Premier's policies were too far to the right. Many of the party's leaders have urged more social reforms to counter the rising strength of the Communists and the extreme left Socialists allied with the Reds.

"Birth Of A Baby" Record May Be Answer To Question

By JAMES R. BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Ever have little Junior ask: "Where did I come from, Mommy?"

If you're like most of us parents, you probably stammered, got red in the face, then blurted out some makeshift answer that sounded a little stupid—even to Junior.

Today, Capital Records previewed the easy way to answer those inevitable stork queries. A new record album due Feb. 1 is called "The Birth of a Baby." It is just exactly that.

The album is a 30-minute tape recording of an actual birth which was produced for a radio broadcast with the parents' cooperation over station WISC, Madison, Wis.

The only people allowed in the delivery room were the doctors, nurses and the mother. The baby, the mother's first, also showed up. All are anonymous, although the father was a University of Wisconsin student when the baby was born two years ago.

A doctor acts as commentator and does a good job on the play-by-play, sounding somewhat like a medical Edward R. Murrow describing the coronation of a queen. He even starts off in the best broadcasting manner, i.e.: "The obstetrician has just entered the delivery room."

From then on, every detail and sound of the baby's birth is recorded, building up the suspense that only nature can create. The album even has a strong finish, the baby's crying drowns out the commentator. Throughout, the voice of the obstetrician can be heard, urging: "Push, mother."

Then the mother's breathing into the anesthetic mask becomes more and more pronounced as the birth nears, creating a weird electronics sound reminiscent of a primitive moan.

The matter-of-fact commentator starts getting a little excited when he announces: "The scalp is now clearing," adding, "There's no much hair."

The commentator reports the clearing of the hips and then the obstetrician announces those famous words: "It's a boy."

Next comes the slapping noise and the voice of the obstetrician: "Come on young man, say hello."

Then the star of the show come on stage with a whimper, followe by a cough, another whimper and then takes over the spotlight with a lusty yowl.

Alan W. Livingston, Capitol vice president, said all royalties from sale of the record will go to the Madison Hospital, where the baby was born.

Road Delays Face Drivers

SALEM (AP) — The Oregon Highway Commission warned Monday of possible minor delays because of construction on the Columbia River Highway between The Dalles and Celilo.

Otherwise, the weekly maintenance report was unchanged from a week ago.

The McKenzie, Mt. Hood and West Diamond Lake highways are closed for the winter by snow.

There are five short sections of gravel surface on the Willamette Highway between Lowell and Odell Lake.

Construction is causing minor delays on the Oregon Coast Highway three miles north of Gardiner, and from two to 14 miles south of Port Orford.

Demo Cry Goes Up As GOP Pushes Plan To Speed Taft-Hartley Consideration

By ROWLAND EVANS JR.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican plans to speed consideration of President Eisenhower's proposals for revising the Taft-Hartley labor law today drew Democratic cries of "dictatorial and steamroller tactics."

The Republican majority of the Senate Labor Committee, headed by Chairman H. Alexander Smith of New Jersey, moved to dispense with hearings and to bring the Eisenhower program to an early vote in the committee.

Smith, who introduced legislation to carry out the 14-point program right after it reached Capitol Hill yesterday, said lengthy hearings last year fully covered the issues involved.

But committee Democrats, led by Sen. Murray of Montana, charged Republican speed-up strategy amounted to "dictatorial and steamroller tactics."

Murray, senior Democrat on the committee, said in an interview that Secretary of Labor Mitchell should be called to explain the recommendations. If the Republicans refuse to do this, Murray contended, it would mean "they are trying to ram this down our throats."

Murray also demanded that top management and labor officials be invited to discuss the proposals in public session.

Smith reportedly might be willing only to ask Mitchell to brief the committee informally behind closed doors.

On the other side of the Capitol, Rep. McConnell (R-Pa), chairman of the House Labor Committee, called the Eisenhower recommendations a "moderate approach" to the problem, but he did not immediately introduce legislation to carry them out.

Murray and other Senate Democrats said the Eisenhower labor proposals contained "some good and some bad." Sen. Lehman (D-Lib-NY), a committee member, said the controversial law needs "far more revision" than suggested by the President.

A major point in the Eisenhower program was a recommendation that Congress require a government-sponsored election among workers to determine whether they approve of a strike.

The President's proposal was couched in general terms and did not specify when such a secret ballot should be taken.

However, when Smith introduced implementing legislation, he proposed that such a vote be taken under National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) supervision after a strike had begun.

Under Smith's bill, a majority of all eligible workers—not just those voting—would have to approve the walkout. In cases where a walkout failed to get the required majority support, workers who failed to return to work could be fired.

This provision of Smith's bill apparently surprised the secretary of labor, who told newsmen he had read Smith's legislation earlier and had not understood that the poll was to be held after a strike began.

Murray termed this "a strike-breaking weapon." He called it "another attempt to try and show that union leaders don't have the backing of the membership." Some other senators said it would strengthen democracy in unions and help guarantee rank-and-file control.

Most of the Eisenhower proposals could be said to have had at least some support in past years from the late Sen. Taft of Ohio, former labor committee chairman and co-author of the Taft-Hartley law.

Perhaps the outstanding exception was Eisenhower's proposal that boards of inquiry, set up by presidential appointment to study national emergency disputes, be empowered to make specific recommendations for settling these disputes.

This proposal appeared likely to encounter resistance, especially from the management side. Employer groups have always opposed giving such boards authority to recommend settlement terms.

The President also told Congress yesterday the law should be changed to "make clear that the several states and territories, when confronted with emergencies endangering the health or safety of their citizens, are not, through any conflict with the federal law, . . . deprived of the right to deal with such emergencies."

Two Southern Democrats—Sen. Lyndon Johnson of Texas, the Senate Democratic leader, and Sen. Russell (D-Ga)—hailed this "states rights" recommendation.

Labor union leaders who commented on the Eisenhower recommendations were uniformly

In Los Angeles, President C. McClellan of the National of Manufacturers said hower's labor message had stated the need for specific Hartley amendments. He law sound, adding: "It needs to be improved in instances."

Sacred Heart Notebook

By MAUREEN RAJCHEL

A hard game was fought by the Trojans on home court, Friday, Jan. 8. Although they were ahead a great deal of the time, they finally lost to the Huskies 35-36. The Huskies also won the opener. Merrill Huskies and fans were guests at a dance sponsored by the Pep Club after the game.

Semester test week is here and with it comes the misery of studying harder and longer and taking examinations. But also there are a few smug faces; these are the lucky students who are exempt from tests because of their "one" average in grades. Not all is bad though. There are still pleasant thoughts that another year is half over, and of the mid-term holiday, Friday, Jan. 15. This is in order for students to "recover" from exams and for teachers to correct papers and make out report cards.

Student body day is here again, Thursday, students will forget uniforms and classes. A student body meeting will be held with a dance following; school will be let out early.

"Medford, here we come," Sunday, Jan. 17. The Pep Club and 13 other students will ride the chartered bus to attend the first encounter of the season between St. Mary's Crusaders and Sacred Heart's Trojans, Academy students will be guests at a dance being held after the game, before they return.

According to a letter received from Herff Jones and Company, the class rings were to arrive Jan. 11. The mail is being closely watched by juniors in the hopes the rings will get here this week.

DIES

LOS ANGELES (AP) —Dr. William A. Smith, emeritus professor of education at UCLA died here Monday. The 73-year-old educator received part of his training at Willamette University.

He also studied at the University of Washington and the University of Chicago. He was teacher and principal of Washington and Oregon high schools before joining the UCLA staff 33 years ago.
