Astoria Hill Laying Put

ASTORIA (AP) — In the fifth consecutive rainless day here Tuesday there was no perceptible movement of Astoria's sliding Commercial Street hill. Police, on watch through Mountain, said they believed the hill either was at rest or was sliding too slight a distance to be noticed. Meanwhile, movers got erecting 6 of the 26 houses affected by the rain-caused slides, preparing to moving them to a parking lot of the immediate slide area. Many will be moved has not been determined. Movers believe they can salvage all but perhaps three—though whether cost would be too excessive is not yet settled. Representatives of Gov. Patterson argued the city council Monday for state support, Lewis, state Highway Department chief, and W. C. Williams, assistant Highway Department chief, recommended a detailed survey of all hills in the city to determine whether they may be hazardous. Col. Arthur Sheets of the Defense Agency also spoke of the state's interest in aiding the city in its disaster relief program.
