Mrs. James P. Leggett and Jim moved this week to Klamath Falls to the Mallard Motel, which Mrs. Leggett will manage during the owners' vacation. Jim enrolled Jan. 4 at OIT to study diesel engineering. During their absence, the Leggett home and property about two miles south of here is being cared for by Mrs. Leggett's brother, Ralph Parker, who moved in last week.
Clay Thomas shut down operations at his Fort Creek portable sawmill Jan. 7 and will resume work in the spring. Following lease of their Old Fort Tavern and Cafe, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas and James Rae moved last week into one of the apartments of Mr. and Mrs. Jess Rightmeyer. They will remain there until their Klamath Falls residence is ready by its present tenants, who have just leased.
Little Jeffrey Knowles, three-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Knowles of the Modoc Lbr. Company camp, is recovering from an attack of measles. He is in Klamath Falls with his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Thomas. The little boy had just recently recuperated from a severe case of bronchial pneumonia, for which he was hospitalized under oxygen in Klamath Falls for a week.
Wintering here this year instead of their usual Red Bluff home are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Orcutt, Gary and Ann. Six-year-old Gary is a first term pupil of Mrs. Frank Strahan at the local elementary school. Orcutt's father, Ira Orcutt, is reported as recovering from complications resulting from a broken rib sustained recently in an accident.

Accidents seem to dominate the news this week on the local scene. Lloyd Smith, 21, has his right ankle in a cast as a result of a skiing accident on New Year's Day. He was skiing down in Crater Lake National Park at the time of the mishap. Young Smith was carried for some distance on the back of one of his skiing companions, Glen Hescok, until a toboggan could be obtained to transport him to the warming hut at Crater Lake rim. There Rangers Byrne Packard and Dick Ward, assisted by Hescok, administered first aid, setting the bone and splinting the ankle. Smith was immediately taken to Klamath Falls, where a doctor placed the ankle in a cast. He was removed to the home of his mother, Mrs. Maurice Benedict. He is getting along fine, and this week visited here with friends and at the home of his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Noah.
Victim of a recent accident which could have been fatal was Lloyd Nicholson, young Fort Klamath stockman, who was working with cattle in Red Bluff two weeks ago, when the squeeze lever on the cattle chute released suddenly, striking Nicholson with terrific force in the mouth. As a result of the mishap, he sustained painful injuries, including having seven of his teeth knocked out, his palate severely cut and both inside and outside his mouth badly lacerated. Many stitches were necessary to close the wounds inflicted. Nicholson was hospitalized for two days in Red Bluff. When the facial swelling has subsided and his injuries are sufficiently healed, considerable dental work will be necessary. You can't keep a good inn down, however, and Saturday, Jan. 9 despite his still painful condition, Nicholson took off for Red Bluff on a business trip in connection with his cattle which are pastured there for the winter.
In a more cheerful vein comes news of the arrival of a Christmas Day baby, a son, born to Mr. and Mrs. Byron Spelce at Midland, Mich. She is the former Celia Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Cecilia graduated from Klamath Union High School in 1949, and in 1953, both she and her husband graduated from Oregon State College. Celia is engaged in agriculture and he is in chemical engineering. Spelce is presently engaged with a corps of fellow engineers in important agricultural research at the Dow Chemical Company, Midland, Mich.
