Comet Crash Investigated

ROME (AP)—British Civil Aviation Minister Alan Lennox-Boyd arrived here early today and went immediately to the island of Elba for a personal investigation of the crash Jan. 1 of the British Comet jetliner. Lennox-Boyd also was to attend the funeral services there today for 10 of the 35 persons who died in the crash of the big airliner into the Tyrrhenian Sea off the west Italian coast. In a second ceremony today, flowers were to be dropped on the sea where the plane plunged between Elba and the island of Monte Cristo. The British admiralty announced yesterday four warships would try to raise the British Overseas Airways (BOAC) plane in an effort to determine the cause of the crash. Adm. Lord Mountbatten, British commander in chief in the salvage attempt. A fishing boat at the crash scene yesterday fished up a piece of the plane wreckage in its nets. BOAC meanwhile sent special security investigators to Beirut, Lebanon; Karachi, Pakistan; Bangkok, Thailand, and Hanoi—the points where the plane was en route to Rome. BOAC said the possibility of an otage "cannot be overlooked" that careful examination of Comets, grounded after the crash off Elba, had produced evidence of structural weakness.
