Quality of potatoes in local store is good .... poor ....
I believe our better grade potatoes are being shipped out, leaving only poorer grade potatoes for local consumption

(yes or no) ....

I would use more potatoes if the quality was improved ....

Lizabeth Scott Puts Arm On Mannish French Fashion

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — American women should give the heave-ho to the mannish styles that France is trying to foist on them, Lizabeth Scott counseled today.

"Oh, they're awful!" she exclaimed in her foggy voice. She had seen some pictures of the late Paris styles. The models had boyish haircuts and their outfits lacked the curves that are customary with most females.

"Terrible, terrible," she said. "It's absolutely subversive! What will happen to the institution of marriage? No man wants to marry someone who looks like his brother. Or, if he's an older man, like his son.

"This could upset our whole system. It's the women who keep men from fighting. If men lose their respect for women and treat them as men, it could lead to chaos!"

Miss Scott emitted a laugh that sounded like an off-center buzzsaw, so I gathered that she wasn't entirely serious. Perhaps she was putting it a little strongly. But there was no doubt that she was perturbed by the Parisian trend in women's styles.

"I think it's all right for women to wear trousers," she commented. "But I favor the fitted, toreador pants that cling to a woman's figure and show her contours. I also like with it a blouse that will reveal the outline of her bosom, not conceal it.

"I'll go halfway on the mannish look. If a woman appears mannish below the neck, her face and hair should be feminine. If she wants to wear a short haircut that looks like a man's, her clothes should be feminine.

"But I can think of nothing worse than a woman wearing one of those flat-chested, narrow-hipped outfits and a short haircut with little makeup. That's supposed to be the new style too—heavy eye makeup, a thin line of lipstick and a white face. Ugh! I suppose some of the ultra-smart women will dress up like that, and you'll see such things in the high-fashion magazines.

"Most American women wouldn't think of sacrificing their glamor so. They would love whatever charm they have for men."

RECOVERS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Actress Suzan Ball has reccovered so rapidly from a leg amputation that she has been moved from the hospital to a sanitarium, her studio said yesterday. The amputation was necessary because of a cancerous growth, her surgeon said.

Nautilus, World's First Atom Powered Submarine, To Be Unveiled Thursday

GROTON, Conn. (AP) — Alexander the Great, who pined for more worlds to conquer, would gasp if he could be around here Thursday to see what has happened to submarines since his time.

The world's first atomic-powered submarine, the USS Nautilus, gets its showers of champagne then from Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower at the shipyards of the Electric Boat Division of the General Dynamics Corp.

Step into the Electric Boat's library, reputed to be the biggest exclusively devoted to submarines and you learn that recorded history gives Alexander's name as the first to be linked to an undersea craft.

By Nautilus standards, it wasn't much of a boat. The Greek philosopher Aristotle described it as a diving bell. It was built for Alexander (356-323 BC) and used to repel a fleet attempting to lift the siege of tyre.

The library staff, headed by Donald Shepard, has come up with a lot of other information pointing up the proud heritage that stretches behind the Nautilus.

For example:

Leonardo da Vinci, the great Florentine inventor and artist of the Renaissance, planned an underwater warship. But he kept it secret because he was afraid it would make war more frightful.

King James I of England reputedly took a short ride in one. It was distinguished by an oil-soaked leather covering and propelled by oars. A Dutchman, Cornelius Van Drebbel, built it a century after Da Vinci's death.

Americans made more submarine history during the revolution. A Yale college student, David Bushnell, discovered how to explode gunpowder under water. To go with his discovery, he built a one man-submarine — A tiny oak vessel called the turtle.

Great battle plans were made for the Turtle. With Sgt. Ezra Lee, a Connecticut volunteer infantryman as commander and crew, the Turtle set out to destroy the British fleet lying in New York.

The idea was to screw a bomb to the bottom of an English ship and set a mechanical fuse.

But unknown to the Americans, the British ships had been sheathed in copper to protect them against barnacles. Sgt. Lee couldn't penetrate the copper to attach his primitive torpedo.

It was left to a Civil War Confederate craft, the Hunley, to become, nearly a century after Lee's failure, the first undersea boat to sink an enemy warship in combat. The Hunley, equipped with a gunpowder "torpedo" attached to a 15-foot pole, blew a hole in the Union corvette USS Housatonic.

The Housatonic sank. But so did the Hunley.

It was only in modern times that the United States Navy bought its first submarine, the Holland.

Uncle Sam got a bargain. It cost John Phillip Holland $236,675.43 to build it in 1897. The Navy bought it in 1900 for $150,000.

Today's conventional submarine costs 10 million dollars.

The price tag on the Nautilus is a secret. But Harry S. Truman, who came here as president on June 14, 1952, for the keel-laying ceremonies, put it at around 30 million dollars, exclusive of the atomic reactor being built by the Westinghouse Electric Corp. She is 300 feet long. Her submerged speed has been predicted at more than 20 knots and she will be able to travel underwater indefinitely. Her crew will have 90 officers and men.

But if the Nautilus is something to bring a gasp from Alexander the Great, you wouldn't know it from the many craftsmen working to get her ready for her dip into the Thames River here tomorrow.

A General Dynamics Corp. spokesman says:

"The men, of course, know they're working on something never done before. But they're pros. They are matter of fact about it and do their job as if it was an ordinary one."

21 Pro-Red POW's To Be Booted

SEOUL (AP) — The 21 pro-Communist Americans held in Korea's neutral zone have until midnight Friday to change their minds before the U. S. Army gives them undesirable discharges or drops them as deserters.

This is the opinion of military sources in Japan and Korea.

According to law, a dishonorable discharge can only be given after a soldier is found guilty by court martial.

Undesirable discharge does not carry with it loss of citizenship, as dishonorable discharge does, but it is the strongest the Army can go without a trial.

Deserters are dropped from the rolls as such and can be tried and given dishonorable discharge if captured.

Under the military code, no courts martial are held in absentia.

Gen. John E. Hull, Far East commander who arrived in Tokyo Tuesday to be on hand for the release of the prisoners held by his command, will not make the decision as to the fate of the pro-Communist Americans.

This decision will be made either by the Department of the Army or perhaps even the National Security Council.

The United States will have to take action regarding the Americans as of midnight Friday if it sticks to its statement that the "time for talking" ends at that point, I couldn't very well say the talking period ended for the anti-Communist POWs, but not for the Americans.

As of midnight Friday the United States will consider the Americans who have refused to come home, as civilians.

The decision on their military status will be announced within 72 hours after the deadline.

Cowboys All Getting Bigger In The Middle

DENVER (AP) — It isn't only in their feet that cowmen are bigger than they used to be. They're bigger all over.

A Denver buyer of Western clothes, noting a boot salesman's observation that the famous Western boot is several sizes larger than it was in bygone years, said today the same holds true for clothing.

Take pants, for instance.

"The average rancher doesn't ride a horse as much as he used to," the buyer said. "He uses a truck or a jeep for a lot of his work. Result: his hips and waistline are expanding. Pants sizes now run 34 to 36."

It's different with the rodeo cowboys, who do a lot of the stiffest kind of riding. They keep their weight down, so their trouser sizes run mostly 30 to 33.

The rodeo hand's favorite hat now is a "dogger style" number with a four-inch brim.

Atom Group To Hear Condon Tale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate-has scheduled a public session House Atomic Energy Committee Tuesday to hear Rep. Condon (D-Calif) reply to charges he attended a closed Communist Party meeting five years ago.

Rep. Cole (R-NY), the committee chairman, said Tuesday the hearing was scheduled at Condon's request.

Condon was barred from last spring's atomic tests in Nevada on what he later told the House was "hearsay" information supplied to the Atomic Energy Commission. He denied Communist Party membership.

BODY FOUND

OROVILLE, Calif. (AP)—The body of a slain prospector was found today after a flooded creek uncovered his shallow grave.

Ernest Bauman, missing since last fall, had been buried not more than 15 feet from a prospect hole he had been working.

Unemployment May Top Two Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Labor Department figures just out indicate that unemployment may be well over the two million mark.

The department's bureau of employment security reported Tuesday that 467,500 workers filed jobless pay claims during the week that ended Jan. 9. This is the largest weekly total recorded since August 1945.

The bureau said 1,816,000 workers were claiming unemployment compensation benefits during the week ended Jan. 2. It added that the new batch of claims could not be added to this total because some of the claimaints usually find new jobs.
