

CAMPBELL was being kept plenty busy at the YMCA desk when this picture was taken. This is National YMCA Week and is being observed at the local Y on Pine Street. Klamath residents are urged to visit the well appointed facility and observe the work that has been made to date, says Paul Campbell, director.

Farm Building Exhibit To Be Held Here, Fairgrounds, Feb. 5th

G. Huber, farm building specialist from OSC, will place special emphasis on hay sheds and grain storage facilities and their construction.

John Campbell, housing specialist from the college, will discuss home building for both city and farm dwellers.

Explanation will be made of the farm house plan service which is available through the Klamath office and provides working drawings and blue prints for home builders at a very nominal cost. Both specialists will be available all afternoon for free consultation.

In the afternoon, starting at 1:30 p.m., the exhibits which will be set up in the large exhibit room will be explained by staffs of the local retailers. The big building will be heated for the comfort of those attending the exhibit.

Blows Off Gen. Clark

South Korean President Rhee charged that General Clark had broken his promise to conduct a search for American prisoners of war.

Clark's statement that he was trying to obtain information on the whereabouts of American prisoners of war was met with a statement that he was not more than a man would guard his prisoners.

Clark's promise he made that he would be a deal. But when they were fully shot to kill a number of American and Korean anti-war prisoners.

Clark believed that he was true but this act of lying that hurts the people of America.

Demand Charge

Portland General Electric Co. announced Tuesday that it will eliminate demand charges on residential customers who use electric power for heating.

The company will save the customers with demand charges an average of $15,000 a year.

The charges are surcharges against heavy residential users. They are levied on customers who use a certain amount of power at any one time.

Life Without Power Was Tough Proposition For Residents Of Ilwaco

ILWACO, Wash. (AP) — Business was stagnant and home life was uncomfortable in this highly electrified city as a power failure continued into its second day Tuesday.

Motorists were having trouble because they could get no gas—station pumps are electrically operated.

The bank was forced to test out its employees' arithmetic because the bookkeeping machines run on electricity.

COSTLY

EVERETT, Mass. (AP) — It cost owners of the closed Capitol Theater $10,000 for repairs and mopping up after 16 feet of water ran unnoticed from a broken pipe for two days. Today they had a water bill from the city for $70.35.

A few restaurants managed to get oil stoves going to cook food. But with no electric blowers, customers got a mixture of smoke, fumes and food odors.

With the fire alarm system out of order, two firemen stood by to drive cars to the homes of other members of the volunteer department to call them if needed.

Only a scattered few homes were heated other than by oil and with no electricity for blowers, the houses were cold. So was food because stoves were off.

The new dial phone system—put into service only Sunday—still was operating after 27 hours on storage batteries with a rated life of 12 hours.

The hospital was all right. It was using its auxiliary power system.

All over the peninsula the story was the same: no power, no lights, no heat.

In Naselle, 12 inches of snow crushed the W. W. Moffitt garage, smashing Moffitt's car and another stored there.

The trouble started when a pole of the Pacific County PUD went down.
