FORT ROCK—Al Baert, R. A. Long and Phil Pitman, booster committee for local work on PEA, problems, and Merritt (Bud) Parks, director, attended the regular meeting of Midstate Electric January 18.

The committee presented the guarantee of revenue from pump irrigation in the area. Further decision regarding the Northern Lake County extension will be made by Fred Hart, area representative, February 2.

R. C. Newcomb, district geologist, Ground Water Branch, U. S. Geological Survey, Portland, will speak at the first annual meeting of the Fort Rock-Silver Lake Soil Conservation District set for February 18 at Fort Rock Grange hall.

Newcomb presented interesting relative facts at the January 21 meeting of the land and resources committee of Fort Rock Grange.

In referring to a map showing locations of present wells and a contour map showing ground water elevations, he called the Fort Rock valley an old lake bed and stated that the water table lies in a large part of the valley floor. It appears that water has an underground escape near Hole-in-the-Ground, Newcomb defined water table as the level below which all pores of rocks are saturated and stated that rocks through the valley are equally porous.

In drilling wells, he reminded the group that the distance to bedrock is important. One must drill until striking material that will hold up and also yield water rapidly. He presented a chart showing that ground water level follows the same curve as rainfall, except ten years behind. He estimated that 40,000 acres of land could be irrigated annually without depressing the water table.

Newcomb is expected to present a general picture of ground water conditions in Eastern Oregon at the district's meeting.

Witnesses Fail To Show Up

Two women arrested on vagrancy charges in connection with the rooming house slaying of Edwin Coyle, 26-year-old Portland gunman, January 13, failed to appear for planning Wednesday in District Court.

District Judge D. E. Van Vector ordered bonds of $50 each posted by the two women, Tinka Taylor and Terry Miller, forfeited.

Before taking this action, Judge Van Vector postponed the case from 10 a. m. to 11 a. m. He explained that due to weather conditions, the defendants might have been unavoidably delayed in reaching the courtroom. The judge also had their names called three times in the Court House corridors.

Defense Attorney Edwin E. Bodinet, who last week requested a postponement of the case, also failed to put in an appearance.

Present in the courtroom as an observer was Attorney A. C. Yaden, counsel for Raymond J. Bodinet, alleged accomplice of Coyle in the rooming house holdup. Coyle and Bodinet are alleged to have bound and gagged the two women charged with vagrancy and Elizabeth Caldwell, maid in the rooming house. The maid escaped and summoned police.

Coyle was fatally wounded when he was shot by Police Officer James O'Neal with a pistol. Bodinet, reportedly also have been armed, dropped his gun and surrendered, police said.

After Judge Van Vector had disposed of vagrancy cases against the Taylor and Miller women, who are also at liberty under $500 each as material witnesses in the shooting case, Attorney Yaden, informed the court he planned to petition for a preliminary hearing for Bodinet.

Judge Van Vector told Yaden that when Bodinet waived preliminary hearing shortly after his arrest, he was advised of his rights by the court. He added that he would consider a petition to reopen the case in his court. Bodinet was ordered held for the County Grand Jury. His bail was set at $15,000.

District Attorney Frank Alderson said he will oppose reopening the case in District Court.

In explaining his action, Attorney Yaden said:

"My client did not have the advice of counsel when he waived his preliminary hearing. I believe he is entitled to a hearing. This is a serious charge and the defendant should be given every right the law allows."

Eisenhower Holding Up Hand In Treaty-Making Row; Developments Eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower appeared today to have the upper hand in his battle with Sen. Bricker (R-Ohio) over a proposed change in treaty-making powers.

With Eisenhower facing further questions about his stand at a White House news conference, the controversy now centered in the Senate headed toward these possible outcomes:

1. Bricker could take the unlikely step of compromising or abandoning the heart of his proposed constitutional amendment that "a treaty shall be made only through which would be valid in sense of treaty."

2. The Senate could for that clause by majority which GOP leaders claim could muster a provision able to the President or a new draft.

3. If Bricker and his refused to accept this alternative would be against the amendment to pass. That is evidence must be the need two-jurisdiction. It would be present constitutional would remain intact. Bricker would accept decision.

4. A majority of the could postpone a showdown to send the whole matter to the Judiciary Committee further study—as proposed Morse (D-Ore).

Eisenhower has said to support an amendment that no treaty or international agreement can contravene a statute. But he obviously rather have no amendment than one he contends would American relations with nations.

Eisenhower has contented Bricker's proposal, as would subject some treaty approval by the 48 states.

The President was reported authoritative quarters swung behind a new proposal. It would be made to the Constitution of the supreme law of the land. The proposal would open treaty executive agreement to view of whether they limit the traditional division of between the state and federal powers.

Handed this proposal Ferguson (R-Mich.) Bricker (R-Ohio) who thinks there is some hope. All past compromise been rejected by Bricker's White House.

If new attempts fail, Bricker would be a to Senate, possibly next some substitute for the proposal.

Speaker Joseph W. Martin has said he expects House to accept whatever at approves.

The 47 Senate Republic appeared about equally divided substitute but a Democrat forecast that his party could reach 54 to 46 substitute—indicating as close but favorable as backers of Eisenhower's, all 96 senators answered call.

Wynne Speaks At 20-30

Floyd Wynne, KFLW announcer and newscaster, spoke at the regular 20-30 club dinner meeting Tuesday night. His subject was "The World Today and Tomorrow."

Wynne pointed out the trouble spots in the world and their contingency on solving the major problems of Russia and the Red China.

"By solving these two major trouble spots will take care of themselves."

The newscaster declared that the emphasis today is, or should be on the problem of Red China, not Russia, since Russia is stalemated due to internal problems. He cited as inference that Russia is like a big bear who has just finished a large meal and wants time to digest it; he doesn't want to fight.

Wynne stated that there is no better way to group people together than through war — an age old tactic of dictators and one which was also effective in raising Red China to a standing in international affairs equal to that of Russia.

The most important thing in the United States today, according to Wynne, is that young America become aware of international problems, its corresponding responsibilities and that it accept these responsibilities. The world of tomorrow can be interpreted in the light of the world today.

"Action!! in your movies!"

This season, with the snow and chances for skating, is ideal for action shots of your family in your own movies. Let's don't lose this opportunity.

The ski lift at Moore Park, the ice skating and your kids on the sled lift at Conger school; these are all the things that we first think of when winter action is mentioned. But! what about our own yard?

The children have a snow fight, they build a snow man, clean the walks (that's if you can get them to); these are personal remembrances.

Start your movies by writing in the snow for a title; follow the yard with general scenes of the title and house, then a couple of feet of film showing each member of the family (keep to action; remember, it's movies). Some close-ups of the children could be next — have them
