Soaring Coffee Prices Explained By US Banker

WASHINGTON (AP) — A banker's explanation why coffee prices are shooting skyward is that Latin American nations are holding back supplies from the American market.

That opinion was expressed by Chester Dewey, president of the Grace National Bank of New York. Dewey's bank does considerable business with Latin America.

Dewey told the Senate Banking Committee yesterday that the sharp price increases cannot be traced to speculation on the New York market. The committee has authorized a subcommittee to probe coffee prices.

The New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange wired the Federal Trade Commission, saying it welcomes that agency's probe of coffee price rises. Gustavo Lobo Jr., exchange president, said the trading center "by its own rules cannot and does not influence prices in any way."

Dewey told the banking committee: "We taught the Latin Americans how to raise prices and they are very apt pupils. Once they learned how to do it, they supplied a little less coffee to the market every week. When the roasters are virtually down to their last canister they have to buy—at a little higher price."

Dewey said frosts have been a factor in reducing coffee supplies. Brazilian officials have placed great stress on relationship of crop killing frosts to the price boosts.

The New Yorker indicated that a determined boycott by coffee drinkers might bring results.

"That's what worries the Latin Americans more than anything else," he said.

Radio Course Progress Made

The halfway mark has been reached in the amateur radio operators' course which is part of the overall civil defense program for this area. Sixteen have attended the twice-a-week classes regularly, according to George F. Connor, instructor.

There has been considerably more interest evidenced in the work than in the two previous years the instruction has been offered, Connor said.

The course concludes in May at which time a federal inspector will come from Portland to give examinations. Those who successfully complete the examination will qualify for radio operators' licenses, amateur class.

There are approximately 50 licensed amateur radio operators in the area at the present time, Connor added.

Windy Altar Eyed By Shaken Bride-To-Be

DENVER (AP) — A middle-aged bride-to-be squinted up at the windy top of a 2-story building where she's to be married tomorrow and declared: "I don't know what I was thinking when I said 'okay.'"

The man to whom Mrs. Mary Varnell, 35, a steelworker on the Denver Club building, the couple will be wed on a platform set across iron beams atop the skeleton framework.

Mrs. Varnell wryly observed today the scene of her wedding is "only" 21 stories higher than her second-floor apartment at Alamosa, Colo., "but it's a lot more windy, I'll bet."

Wilk says he proposed the unusual, hupital altar "on a dare" from some of his fellow workers—who, incidentally, will be attendants at the ceremony.

The grey-haired steelworker said he suggested the site to Mrs. Varnell, whom he'd been courting for six months, by telephone.

"I said it would be all right," Mrs. Varnell recalled. "But I really don't know what I was thinking about."

"It's me that's nervous," grinned the prospective groom.

Student Guides Bus To Safety

GALESBURG, Ill. (AP) — Dale Sophier, 14, yesterday guided a school bus carrying 14 pupils to a safe stop after the driver collapsed.

One pupil was taken to a hospital for observation but the others were not injured.

The bus veered toward a ditch when the driver, Frank Pullen, slumped over the steering wheel. Sophier, a ninth grade student, grabbed the wheel and steered it or 140 feet until it stopped with its right wheels in the ditch. The pupil climbed out an emergency rear door and revived Pullen.

US, Soviet Aides Meet Tonight To Talk Atom Po

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

BERLIN (AP) — The foreign ministers of the United States and the Soviet Union meet tonight in the first top level discussion of President Eisenhower's proposal to put atomic power to work for peaceful purposes.

Over cocktails and caviar last night Russia's V. M. Molotov and America's John Foster Dulles arranged to come to grips with the problem of how to make nuclear energy an aid to better living instead of a horrible device for sudden death.

Molotov and Dulles will meet again tonight after the regular session of the Big Four foreign ministers. They will have with them only a minimum number of advisers and interpreters.

From this meeting may come an indication of just how far the Soviet Union is ready to go on President Eisenhower's proposal of last Dec. 8 that the world powers principally involved with atomic development pool their energy and know how for peaceful purposes.

The decision to hold an atomic meeting tonight was taken at a dinner in the Soviet sector headquarters of Molotov, where Dulles and top American staff members were his guests.

Only an hour earlier they had left the conference table where they had battled over whether Germans from both sides of the Iron Curtain should sit with them in discussing Germany's future.

Molotov had demanded that the Germans be seated. But the Western foreign ministers insisted that German representatives could speak in council only after a reunion through honest and free all-German elections. The Soviet Union has refused to go along with the election proposal.

Molotov argued that there can be no settlement of the German question on "peaceful and democratic" lines unless Germans participate.

Dulles rejected Molotov's proposal, saying the problem is to get new representatives from all Germany.

French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault said the two regimes in Germany — the Communist East and the democratic West — were so far apart he did not think their presence would contribute much to a settlement. He deplored the lack of German representation but said "it is better than to see them tear themselves to pieces before our eyes."

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden said Britain could not accept Molotov's proposition.

Eden introduced yesterday a five-point plan for German unification beginning with the holding of "genuinely free" elections throughout the East and West zones. As a prelude, he proposed a movement of people through now divided country, a free and free politics, a free amount to a lifting of the Iron Curtain which now divides East and West Germany.

The election would be with formation of an all-German government and conclusion of a German peace treaty.

Molotov's answer to the proposal may come today.

Baby Wins O In Snake Fight

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — A battle between a 17-month-old baby and a 3-foot-long snake ended with the baby on the short end.

Mrs. Mary Townsend, doctor's examination of her 17-month-old son, showed he received more than a small wound right hand in the encounter today.

The snake died—minus its tail.
