CIC Meeting

FORT KLAMATH — In honor of Washington's birthday, patriotic motif prevailed throughout the monthly business meeting and social hour of the Civic Improvement Club, February 5. Mrs. Harold L. Wimer presided. The session was opened by Cub Scout Van Wormer advancing the flag for the Pledge of Allegiance; followed the presidential oath of office read by the cub chaplain, Mrs. Donald P. Veatch, who then led the gathering in the Lord's Prayer with which meetings are usually begun.

Mrs. William A. Page, club treasurer, gave the January financial report, after which standing and special committee reports were heard. Mrs. Elizabeth M. Loosley, chairman of the planning committee which maps the year's activities, presented for approval the calendar of months by month special events and public fund raising projects for 1954; for February, such activities include a white elephant sale, held at the Friday afternoon meeting, and a public card party scheduled for Saturday evening, February 27.

Mrs. Margaret Anderson Watson was welcomed as a new club member. A game in keeping with the Washington theme was played with prize for high score going to Mrs. Harold Wimer, club member from Klamath Agency. Two special visitors from Klamath Falls were greeted at the end of the meeting, when Mrs. Virginia Dixon, executive secretary, Klamath County Chapter, American Red Cross, and Mrs. Hugh Swaney, head of the Klamath County Red Cross arrived in the interest of the February 10 visit of the Bloodmobile to the neighboring town of Chilquinn. Details of the project, which is being sponsored in Fort Klamath by the C. I. Club were discussed. Members of the committee securing blood donor pledges are Mrs. Blaine Brattain, a non-club member, and Mrs. Wilbur B. Heseock, longtime member of the organization, both of whom have been actively canvassing homes in the vicinity and have met with a gratifying response from residents of the Wood River Valley as well as Crater Lake National Park and from the small settlement at Crystal.

Hostesses for the social hour at the close of the business meeting were Mrs. Elizabeth M. Loosley and Mrs. James F. Van Wormer, who served delicious refreshments at a long, white cloth covered table in the dining room. All appointments and favors, as well as refreshments, were in keeping with the Washington's birthday theme; centering the table was a dwarf cherry tree, with bright red cranberries for cherries on its branches. Red, white and blue ribbon streamers, miniature American flags and full sized hatchets were also used. Other than Mrs. Virginia Dixon, Mrs. Hugh Swaney, the following were present at Friday's meeting: three special guests of the hostesses, Mrs. Blaine Brattain and daughter Mary; Mrs. Gene Corbin (Anne Gray), visiting here from Stockton with her two small sons at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Gray.

Club members Mrs. Richard O. Varnum, Mrs. Edith Moon, Mrs. Michael (Mike) Beaulieu, Mrs. Ober Brown, Mrs. Bert Gray, Mrs. Wilbur B. Heseock, Mrs. Elmore Nicholson and Teresa Ann, Mrs. Rose M. Noah, Mrs. Lloyd Nicholson and Roger, Mrs. William A. Page, Mrs. Joanna Taylor, Mrs. Norman Van Iderstine, Mrs. Gene A. Page, Mrs. Donald Sanders, Mrs. Walter J. Wright, Mrs. Donald P. Veatch, Mrs. Raymond S. Loosley, Mrs. Dennis S. Knowles, Jeffrey and Leanna, Mrs. Margaret Anderson Watson, Mrs. William Brewer, Mrs. Harold L. Wimer, all of Ft. Klamath, and Mrs. Harold Winger, Klamath Agency.

Starching a garment makes subsequent washings of the garment easy, since roll tends to lodge on the starch rather than on the fabric. It is a good idea to starch house dresses and aprons.

Today's Women

By DOROTHY ROE, AP Women's Editor

Talking with assorted businessmen, I've decided that the laziness of women is one of the chief assets of American industry.

In fact, the top brains of science and finance are constantly at work to make us even lazier. We are encouraged to buy automatic washing machines, electric dishwashers, electronic devices for watching the baby, cooking the roast or opening the garage doors. Labor-saving devices are among the most important products of our industrial age. We are pampered by food companies which do all our cooking for us. We can buy anything from chicken pot pie to French hors d'oeuvres in frozen food packages, ready to heat and serve. All we need to become a champion cake baker is a package of one of the popular cake mixes. Biscuits and hot rolls that grandma used to labor hours to make are ours in a package. The modern trend toward less drudgery and more fun is a constant delight to the top brass of U.S. industry. My most recent conversation on the economic importance of being lazy was with a big, genial Irishman named Dan Mahony, a merchandising executive for Lily-Tulip Cup Corp. Naturally he thinks it's a crime to have to wash dishes and believes everybody should use paper cups, plates and containers. He says: "We don't even have to work very hard to convince people that it's more fun to live informally. No woman ever really enjoyed washing dishes—that's for sure. And today's trend toward back yard dining, barbecues, patio parties and TV snacks is right up our alley. "The day of stiff, formal living is gone, thank goodness. Your grandmother probably insisted on a full service of china and glassware at every meal. But today's housewives are smarter. They give the gang hamburgers in the back yard on paper plates and burn the dishes afterward in the barbecue grill." The trend of the times is toward making practically everything disposable—and we've already gone a long way toward that goal. Today you can serve a full-course dinner on disposable dishes, bake in disposable pans, store your leftovers in paper cartons, dress the baby in disposable diapers, mop the sink with paper towels, wipe your nose with a tissue handkerchief and even go swimming in a paper bathing suit. Some metropolitan hotels supply guests with paper nightshirts and slippers if an emergency finds them without baggage.

When you come to our corset department, here's how you'll be fitted comfortably in your Perma-lift Girdle

First we will determine your waist measurement. If you get a girdle that's too small, it's going to hurt and you'll bulge someplace else — and that's not good. Correct measurement insures easy comfort. "Perma-lift" Girdles are so styled that there is a 12" maximum allowance between waist and hip for your hip measurement. For example, if your waist measures 26", your girdle will fit a 36" to 38" hip — so you should have no trouble finding one that is perfect for you.

Length is just as important as size — and is determined by your hipline. If it's a "Perma-lift" Girdle, wear it at the waistline or 3/4" above. The very bottom of your garment should anchor from 1" to 1 1/2" below your derriere. If it's too long, it will ride up — so you see how important length is. "Perma-lift" Girdles are made in proportioned lengths, from 12" to 16", so you can get a custom fit if you look for the points just mentioned.

Now if you want even more comfort than an ordinary garment can give you, you'll get something special in a "Perma-lift" Girdle or Pantie. Those bones that bother you so much in other girdles, are eliminated. They don't add one bit of support — simply keep the girdle from rolling over — and "Perma-lift" accomplishes the same thing without them. A soft, yet firm Magic Inset is designed in the center panel — your girdle won't roll over, won't bind, yet will stay up and give you undreamed of support and comfort too.

Perma-lift GIRDLES NO BONES ABOUT IT STAYS UP WITHOUT STAYS
