All drillers were urged to be present for the water resources committee meeting, March 1.

Coon Attacks Funds Delay

WASHINGTON — "False economy" in delaying Northwest electric power production caught an attack from Sam Coon this week.

Appearing before an appropriations subcommittee, the Eastern Oregon Congressman opposed a year's delay in installing the last 12 generating units at Chief Joseph Dam, charging the delay would be "practicing false economy."

Declaring that The Dalles, McNary and Chief Joseph Dams are three large sources of quick new power which the Northwest needs for propserity and continued growth Congressman Coon also urged an increase of $11 millions to prevent a delay in finishing The Dalles, and supported an appropriation of $24 millions to keep completion of McNary on schedule.

The $27 million appropriation proposed by the Bureau of the Budget for Chief Joseph Dam would delay for a year the placing of orders for 12 of the 16 generators. Coon proposed an increase of $3 millions to keep power production on schedule.

"Generally it is hard to change the recommendations of the Bureau of the Budget," he declared after the hearing, "but I think it should be done in a case where they are practicing false economy. If we have already put $82 millions into building Chief Joseph Dam, we must get it to work as soon as possible."

"We believe in prompt and efficient development" of the rivers of the Northwest, he added.

K. F. Student To Attend School

OREGON STATE COLLEGE, (Special) — Rosemary Murray, Klamath Falls, senior in home economics at Oregon State college, will attend Merrill-Palmer school in Detroit, Michigan, spring term.

Her studies there were arranged under a cooperative program OSC maintains with the noted child development research school.

A major in family life and home administration, she will return to OSC for graduation in June. Her parents, are Mr. and Mrs. Percy Murray, 812 Pacific Terrace.

The cooperative program was established by OSC to give its home economists, experience in child development studies and big city community services and social welfare problems. Miss Murray will work on problems of school age children and parent education.

OSC is one of 12 leading home economics schools—and the only one on the Pacific Coast—participating in the program.

She is spending the last three weeks of this term in Portland nursery schools as field experience for teacher preparation.
