Cruelty Denied In Burn Case

An appeal to set aside the one-year jail sentence imposed on Harold Greenwood, 28-year-old stone mason, for forcing his 4-year-old stepson to burn himself three times on a stove, was taken under advisement Friday by Circuit Judge David R. Vandenberg.
The court delayed decision on whether the penalty set by District Judge D. E. Van Vector was "cruel and excessive" after hearing eloquent pleas for clemency by Defense Attorneys U. S. Balentine and A. C. Yaden.
The lawyers called attention to the fact that before the incident on which the complaint against Greenwood was based had occurred, the defendant had lost a home which was burned to the ground.
"The child had been persistent in playing with fire," Attorney Yaden declared. "When the defendant entered the kitchen and found the door to the stove open and the child near it with burning paper, he realized that the child must be taught a lesson."
Yaden denied that Greenwood intended cruelty. He added that witness after witness had testified earlier that Greenwood loved the little boy and showered him with fatherly attention.
Attorney Balentine called the court's attention to the fact that under the Oregon constitution, if the defendant had been the real parent of the child, the charge on which he was sentenced could not have been filed.
Balentine asked the court to take into consideration that Greenwood was a law-abiding, hard-working man and had never been in trouble before.
The attorney said also that public opinion had been inflamed by widespread publicity given the case and that the defendant pleaded guilty to the charge without advice of counsel.
District Attorney Frank Alderson urged the judge to uphold the sentence of the lower court. He said the fact that Greenwood forced the child to put his hands on the hot stove three times showed he was cruel.
Judge Vandenberg did not indicate when he will render a decision in the case. Greenwood is at liberty under $3,000 bond.

Malin Church Plans Dinner

The little porkers are billed in the main event at Merrill Sunday night when men of St. Augustine's Catholic Church serve their ham dinner.
Cooked and served with a masculine touch, the family style dinner is slated for Sunday, March 7, in the parish hall, with serving starting at 3 p.m.
Robert Petrik is chairman of the event, and announces a menu of baked ham, baked Klamath Russet—home grown, salad, beans and peas, rolls, relishes, homemade pies, milk and coffee.
Assisting Petrik on the committee in charge of arrangements are Johnny O'Neil, Don Harris, Jerry Ahern, John Degnan and Tony O'Keefe.
Entertainment will follow, under the chairmanship of Don Harris.
Proceeds from the dinner will go towards paying the debt on the new parish hall.
There will be no charge for pre-school children if accompanied by their parents.

Fight Looms Over Hawaii Statehood

WASHINGTON (U)—The extent of Communism in Hawaii emerged Friday as the major issue in the Senate battle over statehood for the territory.
Sen. Eastland (D-Miss.) fired the opening salvo Thursday, declaring that "admission of Hawaii to statehood would place on the floor of the Senate of the United States two senators who, if not Communists, would be subject to influence from Moscow."
The charge was promptly disputed by Chairman Hugh Butler (R-Neb.) of the Senate Interior Committee, who first raised the Communist issue in opposition to Hawaii statehood in 1945.
Butler said he is now convinced "the people of Hawaii have brought the Communist menace under control."
Senate Democrats, meanwhile, prepared to open a drive next week to add the Alaska statehood bill to the Hawaii bill. In the past, Hawaii has usually voted Republican; Alaska, Democratic.
Sen. Jackson (D-Wash.) said Friday the assurances given Thursday by Majority Leader Knowland (R-Calif.) that the Alaska bill would be brought up separately in the near future will not satisfy Alaska statehood supporters.
Jackson said they still have "two principal objections to keeping the bills separate":
1. Lack of assurance that a separate Alaska bill would be scheduled for consideration by the House leadership. The House approved Hawaii statehood last year.
2. Lack of assurance that an Alaska bill would not be vetoed by the President.
The Senate, in recess Friday, will resume debate on the bill Monday.

Lumbermen Eye Market Conditions

SAN FRANCISCO (U)—An alertness to tighter market conditions developing for the industry because of the changing business picture was voiced in major speeches to the Western Pine Assn. Friday.
An estimated 300 lumbermen from the 12 Western pine states were in attendance.
"These are the times which will try the talent, tenacity, foresight and working ability of our industry," said U. R. Armstrong of Winchester, Ida., association president.
"But that should stimulate better quality, lower costs, more aggressive selling and a search for new markets."
S. V. Fullaway Jr., secretary-manager, said this is a year in which Congress "should be kept constantly aware of the thinking and desires of the people back home."
W. E. Griffie, assistant secretary-manager, said the total volume of construction activity, expected for this year is "one of the brightest spots in the entire business picture."
He said total construction will come close to last year's $4.8 billion dollars and may exceed it. He pointed out that a large percentage is for schools, roads and other public works which are relatively "depression proof."
Griffie said lower prices in some grades of lumber are an important factor in the lumber market and "should swing some business back from competing materials to lumber."
Government purchases of lumber, he continued, are running 70 per cent behind a year ago.
Absence of Canadian competition and more winter storms this season, Griffie said, have helped to keep fir production on the West Coast in fair balance with demand.

Fort Klamath

By MYRTLE WIMER
Mr. and Mrs. Warren (Lefty Wild Eagle) Wilder and three sons spent the weekend of February 19 at Eugene where they were houseguests at the home of his sister and family, the C. J. Molliers. On Saturday, the Wilders gave a performance for the Moose Lodge of Eugene, appearing in colorful native tribal costumes.
This past week the Wilder family journeyed to Chemawa Indian School, near Salem, Thursday and Friday the school observed the 4th anniversary of its founding. The celebration featured a reunion of Chemawa alumni, among whom is Lefty Wild Eagle. The Wilders were unable to be on hand for opening festivities Thursday, but were present for Friday's program and reunion.
After spending a 25-day furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur B. Heseock, Fort Klamath, and with his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hatcher, Pvt. Floyd Heseock left Wednesday February 24, for Camp Stoneman, California, the army separation center for servicemen being sent overseas. Floyd's wife and small son, Keith, remained here for a few days with the Heseock family before returning to her parents' home.
Mr. and Mrs. William Zumburn are enjoying a combined business and pleasure trip in Washington. They left last week to purchase ranch cattle and visit with her relatives.
Two births are in the local news this week. Word was received of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. Bill Kendall, John Day, on February 16. The new arrival, the couple's first weighed 6 lbs. 1/2 oz. at birth and has been named Michael Ray. Kendall is a brother of Frank Kendall, and is well known throughout Klamath county, where he lived before going to John Day.
The second birth announcement makes grandparents of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O. Dyche, with the arrival Friday, February 26 of an 8 lb. son. This is the couple's first child and the first grandchild of the senior Dyches. He has been named Thomas James, in honor of the grandfather and father.

ROOTIN' TOOTIN' faculty rally section gave their all at the annual faculty-student basketball game Wednesday at KUHS—and their team won 46-41. Some of the characters who shed teaching roles for a bit of horseplay are identified in the front row, wearing the derby, Dwight French; in black next to him, Mrs. Frank Tucker; on this side of him Mrs. Rex Hunsaker and Mrs. John McGinnis, yell leaders; and in the next row back of them, in horn-rimmed glasses and false nose, Orpha Hudson; and in the third row, Ruth Zuelke (in the big bonnet); Mrs. Frank Howard, with chin strap; and Mrs. Hal Wainscott, with big roses on chapeau, seated near Principal Charles C. Ison at end of row.

FORT KLAMATH

Attending the Eugene and Corvallis basketball games Friday and Saturday were Mr. and Mrs. Blaine Brattain, Guss A. Page and Gene, Elmer Zumburn and Billie. During the Brattains' absence, their son, Douglas, and daughter, Mary, were left in the care of paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Eldon M. Brattain.
Mr. and Mrs. Neil Neilson spent the weekend visiting here from Prineville at the home of his aunt, Mrs. Margaret A. Watson. Also here for the weekend from Prineville were Clifford Engle and Bob Brattain. The men are all employed in logging on the J. L. Jacob ranch there by William Wampler, Chiloquin logging contractor, and the work of cutting and hauling the timber to the Ochoco mill at Prineville is virtually completed. The young Neilsons will move back here soon, while Engle and Blaine Brattain will be home with their respective families. Blaine and Bob are working in partnership as timber fallers, and Bob returned to Prineville this week to finish the work of cutting remaining trees with the brothers' power saw.
Attending the annual luncheon meeting of the Camp Fire Girls at the Willard hotel in Klamath Falls, were Mrs. Frank Strahan, Mrs. Wilbur B. Heseock, Patricia Louise and Sheron and Mrs. Bert Gray. The group reported a delightful time.
Among several signs of spring observed locally was a beautiful and unusual sight Thursday morning when 11 white swans flew over the valley in perfect formation, uttering their peculiar whistling cry. The beautiful birds are scarce and are protected by law. Occasionally it is a privilege to see one or two of the species, but to sight 11 at once is a rare sight here.
Robins, killdeer and crows abound in the valley and the snow is leaving fast. Cattle men are anticipating an early spring this year and are planning on bringing stock into the valley for pasture as soon as

Dulles Gets Close Guard At Caracas

CARACAS, Venezuela (U)—The Venezuelan government is taking no chances on anything happening there to U. S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.
From the moment he arrived Sunday afternoon for the Inter-American Conference, he has been ringed by an extraordinary guard. Some of the numerous security men hovering about are from the United States.
Special police and soldiers armed with automatic rifles stood by when President Eisenhower's plane, the Columbine, taxied in with Dulles at Caracas Airport. Doors at both ends of the reception building were closed although this shut off the cool breeze from those awaiting him.
For the trip to the residence of U. S. Ambassador Fletcher Warren, Dulles rode in a large sedan that looked like any other car. Its windows and windshield glass were about an inch thick, however, and steel plates shielded vulnerable parts of the body.
Dulles is still using the same car, which was furnished by Venezuelan President Marcos Perez Jimenez.
Motorcycle police and a patrol car escort the limousine whenever it leaves the embassy residence. Dulles' route is charged in advance by the security police. All along the streets and at corners they lurk as sidewalk loungers.
When Dulles delivered his address at the plenary session of the conference Thursday, 24 men wearing the uniforms of ushers suddenly appeared down the outside aisles of the auditorium and in the unoccupied balcony. Extra police watched from photographers' booths above the speaker's stand and from the audience.
Pedro Estrada, head of the Venezuelan security police, personally supervised the security measures.
