

Low Butter Price Cause Of Concern

WASHINGTON (AP) — Butter at 59 cents a pound may have housewives in high spirits but farmers and some politicians are anxiously watching for another set of price rises.

The prices that concern them are those milk plants and processors now will pay farmers for milk and butterfat. These prices are not directly set by the government, though it buys the finished products at fixed levels for support purposes.

The reduced retail prices of butter—and presumably cheese and the support prices paid for these products by the government, beginning Thursday. Secretary of Agriculture Benson lowered the support in a move intended to check the piling up of huge surpluses in government hands and stimulate consumption. But some farm spokesmen and lawmakers from dairy areas challenged both the fairness and effectiveness of his action.

The reduction in the government butter support price ranged around 6 1/2 cents a pound, varying in different markets, and was expected by Agriculture Department officials to bring retail prices down about 10 cents, or to a level between 65 and 70 cents a pound.

Some big retailers were reported preparing to offer butter at 58 cents.

Sen. Humphrey (D-Minn.) and Kefauver (D-Tenn.) tried vainly up to the last minute Wednesday for Senate action that would at least postpone the scheduled cut. Other members of Congress were expected to press for congressional boosting of the support price.

Their undoubted effort will be guided by prices which dairymen get for milk and butterfat under the new support program rather than by retail prices for the finished product.

The Agriculture Department has not yet come up with a method of assuring dairymen a specified level of prices. All the agency does is to offer prices for butter, cheese and dried milk which are designed to enable milk plants and processors to pay dairymen and processors for their milk and butterfat.

Trade Plans Criticized

WASHINGTON (AP)—An administration-approved move to expand the Western world's trade with Russia in non-war items bumped into some sharp opposition in Congress today.

Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R-N.J.), a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, voiced criticism of any step in shipments to the Soviets and their satellites of what foreign aid director Harold Stassen described as "peaceful goods."

Stassen said on his return yesterday from a London conference with top British and French officials he anticipates "compatible with security requirements, an expanded trade with the Soviet Union and with Eastern Europe states in the export to them of peaceful goods in exchange for items and materials which the free world can use."

Smith said he is "dragging my feet" on any increase in East-West trade, and he added in an interview:

"I am afraid that by giving the Iron Curtain countries some of the necessities of life we will only enable them to give more attention to the development of their military position.

"There is a definite question in my mind whether we ought to do anything to help the economy of the countries that are causing all of the world's troubles."

Sen. Russell (D-Ga.) said he is not opposed to a stepup in East-West trade in nonstrategic materials but believes there must be a tight check rein on the nature of supplies shipped behind the Iron Curtain.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Air Force announced Thursday that Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, former chief of staff, "has taken a turn for the worse and is falling rapidly."

Vandenberg was admitted to Walter Reed Army Hospital last Oct. 2. He had undergone an abdominal operation in 1952.

The Air Force has declined to state the nature of the general's illness.

However, private physicians who attended him in his first illness said that at that time it was found he was suffering from cancer of the prostate gland and that subsequently the malignancy spread to the hips, spine and other bones.

Pacific Fish Said Okay

TOKYO (AP)—A highly qualified American scientist said Wednesday he is certain there are no dangerously radioactive fish in the Pacific—even in waters around the Bikini atomic proving grounds.

The top-level atomic scientist talked with newsmen only after specifying that he was not named. His statement came after a Japanese official indicated that Japan might ask the United States to find a new testing grounds if a survey indicates explosions in the Bikini area jeopardize fishing and shipping.

Deputy Prime Minister Takekazu Ogata told a Diet committee the survey is underway.

The American scientist told newsmen the 22 Japanese fishermen burned by a shower of radioactive ashes after the March 1 hydrogen explosion at Bikini now are in "the critical stage" but there is a good chance all will recover completely.

Radioactivity aboard the fishermen's boat, The Lucky Dragon, is dissipating "as fast as we expected, or maybe a little faster," the scientist said.

The scientist said his opinion on the radioactivity of fish in the Pacific was based on careful study of fish in the Bikini region and elsewhere since A-bomb tests were started in 1945.

He agreed, however, that the catch from The Lucky Dragon should have been destroyed more so because it was contaminated by ashes.

He also called it a "good idea" to check fish for radioactivity, as both Japan and the United States are doing, to reassure people that the fish are safe and to provide "additional data to evaluate."

Trial Blocked By Demurrer

A demurrer to a district attorney's complaint against an alleged intoxicated driver was filed in District Judge D. E. Van Vactor's court Thursday.

Defense Attorney George Proctor contends the complaint against his client, Vaughn Elliott Christensen, 38-year-old switchman, does not comply with Oregon law. The demurrer states the complaint does not state a crime.

Christensen was arrested March 23 by state police near the intersection of Summers Lane and Clinton Ave. He was released on $400 cash bail.

It was expected Judge Van Vactor would set a time for hearing arguments on the demurrer late Thursday.

Fund Raising Sale Planned

Camp Fire Girls of the Klamath Basin swing into action Saturday April 3 to begin their annual candy mint sale.

Chairman of the sale this year is Klamath Falls attorney, Don Piper. Piper pointed out today that the money raised through the sale of Camp Fire Girls' candy mints, given out of the street by the organization's summer camping program and camp improvements.

Piper added that eight girls in the Klamath area will receive "campships" by doing the best mint selling jobs. The program also enables underprivileged girls to attend summer camp.

While girls canvass residential and rural areas of the basin selling double boxes of the mints for a dollar per sale, booths will be set up at four Klamath Falls locations, to help with sales.

The booths Saturday, opening day of the sale, will be at the U.S. National Bank, the Quality Market, First National Bank, and Miller's Department Store.

The sale will last through April 11, and Camp Fire Girls hope to sell more than 7,000 boxes of the mints. And for the girls themselves, Piper said, there's not a cent of personal profit.

Jury Convicts Suspended Cop

KANSAS CITY (AP)—A federal court jury has convicted Elmer Dolan, suspended St. Louis policeman, of perjury—a charge that grew out of the arrest of kidnapper Carl Austin Hall.

Dolan was found guilty Wednesday of lying to a grand jury about the handling of ransom money recovered in Hall's room.

Judge Albert A. Ridge deferred sentencing pending a motion for a new trial. Dolan's attorney said he would seek a new trial and April 15 was set as the deadline for filing the motion.

Dolan and Louis Shouder, former St. Louis police lieutenant, participated in the arrest of Hall last Oct. 6. Hall and his paramour, Mrs. Bonnie Brown Brady, were executed last December for the kidnap-killing of 6-year-old Bobby Greenleaf.

Only $26,280 of the $500,000 ransom paid by Robert's father, automobile dealer Bobby C. Greenleaf, was recovered.

Dolan was indicted on a perjury charge after he told a grand jury he carried into a St. Louis police station one of the packages containing ransom money shortly after Hall was arrested and booked.
