Research Office Opened in North

Stanford Research Institute, major public service applied research organization of the West, has opened a new Pacific Northwest Division with the establishment of an office in the Equitable Building in Portland.

Through the new office, the institute expects to launch a research program on problems of long range development of power and water resources of the Pacific Northwest, working closely with other groups and interests in the area.

Charges Differ in Driving Case

The wheel of fortune took an adverse turn Saturday for Melvin Leon Barkley, 34-year-old Chiloquin laborer. He was in the wrong place at the wrong time.

Named as manager of the Portland office is Patrick M. Dowling, a specialist in area development research and formerly assistant to the director of international research at SRI.

Governor's Visit

changing the title to "vacation business." He urged that tourists not only be attracted to Oregon, but that they be encouraged to stay a week to ten days, and stated that tourists last year brought $130,000,000 new dollars into the state, which turned over eight times to total almost one billion dollars in business.

The some 230 service club members who crowded the banquet room of the Willard Hotel at noon heard the governor praise service clubs for making government easier through their unremunerative service to their communities.

Later in the day, the governor held a press conference in which he reiterated his stand on what he calls Oregon's "vacation business," and commented favorably on possible statehood for Hawaii, which he feels, is more able to maintain itself than Alaska.

"I will be favorable to statehood for Alaska such time as its industries and economy make it ready,"

DINNER SPEECH Governor Patterson's visit to the Klamath country was concluded by a dinner at the Willard, at which he told his hearers: "What a man has done before is the best criterion by which to judge what he will do in the future. If what I have been able to do in the legislature and in the brief time I have been in the governor's office by accession is pleasing to you, I shall hope for your approval of my candidacy for an elective term."

One of Oregon's achievements of which he is proud, he said, is a start toward a retirement system that will assure reasonable security to those who have spent a considerable part of their lives in public service.

"We can never pay our public servants enough to attract men and women of top quality by money alone, in competition with private business and employment," he added. "Their chief reward will have to be their knowledge of a job well done. The retirement system we are getting started will help toward that end."

BETTER SCHOOLS He spoke of Oregon's progress toward better schools and better roads, in both of which he has taken an active interest during his service in the legislature. In 1949, he said, Oregon faced the problem of providing some 750 million dollars to bring its highways up to modern standards.

"We undertook to provide this sum at the rate of about 50 million dollars per year for a period of 15 years. Toward that end, we doubled our license plate fee, added a cent per gallon to our gasoline tax and overhauled our system of truck taxation. Although we have been faced by a declining dollar value due to high cost of road construction, we have reason to hope that we shall be able to keep pace with the growth and development of our state in the way of highway construction and maintenance."

He mentioned an industrial development department to promote growth of industry in Oregon and a water resources department to aid in the problem of intelligent conservation of Oregon's all-important water resource as projects of the immediate future.

"Our government," he said in conclusion, "must be so conducted that our people will have faith in its integrity. If that can be accomplished, we shall have nothing to fear for the future."

Governor Patterson was introduced by Elmer Lemler. Floyd Wynne was master of ceremonies and introduced Mrs. Patterson to the company.

Home — Mr. and Mrs. Merton J. Brown, Tulelake, have returned from Yakima, where they attended the 50th wedding anniversary of Brown's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Cleve Brown, members of a pioneer Washington family.

Conference — The spring conference of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs is meeting this weekend at Grants Pass. Going over for the sessions convening through Sunday, are Imogene Boothby, president; Beulah Elliott, first vice president; Polly Schroeder, second vice president; Dorothy Lowell, chief chairman; Lenore Gallagher, public relations chairman; May E. Phinney, state officer and Isabelle Brinker.

Historical Meet — The Yreka Fire Department will be the subject for the program at the regular meeting of the Siskiyou County Historical Society, Saturday, April 10, 2 p.m. at the museum in Yreka. Several speakers are on the program which will relate the contribution of the fire department to the city's fine safety record of the past several years.

Malin — Community Presbyterian Church congregation will be host to the Rainbow Girls of Malin at the regular meeting worship service Sunday, April 4, at 11 a.m. The regular quarterly communion service will follow the worship portion of the program on the same date.

Touring — Willamette University's cappella choir and string ensemble from Salem is on a tour of 15 Oregon, California and Nevada communities. After appearing here they went to Redding, and will be heard at Reno tonight. Ronald Herabarger and Robert Van Vactor are members.

Meeting — Pacific Northwest Trade Association, featuring the subject, Trade Opportunities of the Pacific Northwest, will be held at the Multnomah Hotel in Portland April 11 to 13.

Pvt. Fred E. Friedel — Son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Friedel of Klamath Falls, moved to within 900 miles of the North Pole during Exercise Wind Chill, the Army's northernmost airborne operation, last month. He is with the 3rd Battalion of the 11th Airborne Division's 511th Regiment from Fort Campbell, Kentucky.

Movie — "Give Us This Day" is the title of the new 30-minute full color movie, filmed in Oregon, just completed by the Oregon Wheat Growers League. A copy of the film can be obtained for group showing by writing Dick Baum, executive secretary, Oregon Wheat Growers League, Pendleton.

Office Opens — for Highway Life-savers Committee of Oregon Citizens, Inc., to coordinate the statewide program. Headquarters has been established at 607 U.S. National Bank Building, Portland. Millicent Rogers is office secretary. Walter W. R. May, as assistant secretary of the committee, is in charge.

List Of Movie Hopefuls Show Variety Of Success

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (U)—What has happened to the class of '49?

Five years ago, I picked 19 young film hopefuls as stars of tomorrow. Recently I found a clipping of the story, and it was interesting to note what had happened to all of them.

Two have retired from movies, one appears in temporary retirement, one has left Hollywood for other fields and six seem to be doing well in films. All have left the contracts they held five years ago. That shows you what Hollywood's depression has done to talented rosters at the studios.

When I picked the talented 19, all were more or less unknown to the American public. Here's the list and what has happened to them:

1. John Derek rose to fame with his gripping performance in "Knock on Any Door." Although he became a boxoffice favorite, Columbia never gave him enough top roles to establish solid stardom. He left the studio last year, but bounced back with a Paramount contract that holds high promise. I still think he's the Ty Power of tomorrow.

2. Peggy Dow probably could have been a top dramatic star today, if she had chosen to. But she prefers to live in Tulsa as the wife of Walter Heinrich III, wealthy oil man.

3. Sally Forrest started off well with good roles at MGM, but was dropped in the economy wave. She is now at RKO, where big things are promised for her.

4. Keeffe Brasselle was another MGM casualty. But he bounced back in the title role of "The Eddie Cantor Story" and as a night club entertainer.

5. Colleen Townsend appeared set for big things at 20th Century-Fox. But she turned her back on a four-figure salary for a church life with her husband, Dr. Louis Evans Jr.

6. John Barrymore Jr. was weighed down with his father's reputation and couldn't measure up to it as a film actor. He has been scoring a success on the stage. Hollywood will hear from him again, after he gets the proper seasoning.

7. David Brian ended his Warner contract and has been doing well as a free lance. He has his work cut out for him as "Mr. District Attorney" on TV.

8. Ruth Roman, another Warner escapee, lost momentum when she retired to have a baby. But she's back and has drawn a series of good roles.

9. Nancy Olson also dropped out for maternity reasons. Since leaving Paramount, she has done a number of films, most at Warner.

10. Mario Lanza is the question mark of the whole team. He has retired himself from the Hollywood scene after a lengthy squabble with MGM. Incidentally, he was temperamental even in 1949. He was the only one of the 10 who didn't show up for the class picture.

Soloist, Orchestra Acclaimed

By PATI O'CONNOR

With a graciousness and ease an "artist" — in the temperamental sense of the word — could never have managed, Miss Ruth Lobough, guest soloist at the KUHUS orchestra concert Friday evening, easily overcame an attack of stage fright and finished with a superb performance.

When her mind blanked on the opening passage of the first movement of Schumann's "Concert in A Minor," in which she was featured with the symphony orchestra, Miss Lobough left the stage and returned with the moral support of her score. Once the opening passage was played and she was well into the composition, the elementary school vocal music supervisor performed like a veteran concert pianist.

Miss Lobough is not a concert pianist. Prior to her appearance last evening, she remarked that this was her first concert, but the audience at this final in KUHUS spring concert series will hope it was not her last.

Miss Lobough's every finger is expressive of the composer and her own personality. Her playing is gentle but firm, relaxed and expressive, and few players so obviously enjoy their playing as does Miss Lobough. That enjoyment is contagious, and spread through every passage of Schumann's concerto.

The support of the symphony orchestra in the piece was admirable, especially considering the young age of the players and the difficulty of the Schumann selection.

The old adage, "Familiarity breeds contempt," did not hold true last evening, particularly in the orchestra's rendition of "The Gypsy Baron Overture" by Strauss and "Temptation" by Arthur Freed and Nacio Herb Brown. Outstanding in these selections, in this layman's opinion, were the clarinet solos and the violin section, a section we feel is one of the most difficult to perfect.

The Girls' Glee Club, which provided the intermission entertainment, did an admirable job on Clokey's South American Nocturnes. The group's enunciation, especially in phrases ending in consonants, detracted from an otherwise good performance in other selections.

Walter P. Smith, director of the orchestra, deserves much credit for the development manifest Friday evening in these potential great names in music.

Fish Liberation Program Started By State Crews

Oregon State Game Commission crews have started the annual fish liberation activities. At present, six trucks are in operation, and shortly three more will be added to the rolling stock.

Thus far, approximately 300,000 fish have been released. Plantings have included silver salmon, steelhead, and chinook salmon which have been planted in the coastal streams and all of which have been marked for future identification.

The crews are now releasing yearling trout in coastal lakes, and beginning next week, trout will be released into the streams of the area. Also next week, trucks from the new Leaburg hatchery on the McKenzie river will start hauling to Willamette valley reservoirs, and the Oak Springs hatchery near Maupin will start sending fish to various parts of eastern Oregon. In addition to these liberations of legal-sized fish, kokanee fry will soon be stocked in several lakes, and some stocking of fingerling-sized rainbow and cutthroat trout will be carried out in coastal waters.

Reino Koski, liberation biologist for the game commission, listed the following tentative schedule of releases of catchable-sized fish to be carried out during the coming year: March, 50,000 trout; April, 600,000 trout; May, 600,000 trout; June, 550,000 trout; July and August, 600,000 trout.

Through the marking of many of these fish, the commission is attempting to gather information as to any sportman catching marked to their whereabouts after release. Fish can aid the commission in this work by sending in a report containing full details regarding the catch.

Survivors other than her husband include three sons, Donald of Belmont, Douglas of Portland and Richard of Obergarmmerau, Germany; also a brother, Frank E. Crane of San Francisco.

wise good performance in other selections.
