Morse Raps Info Setup

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon restated his belief Saturday night that Congress isn't being told enough about Indochina.

"The administration should call an executive session of Congress to unfold the Indochina picture," Morse said in an interview. "I want the representatives of the people taken into confidence of the administration before the determination of a policy which could lead to war."

Morse said that voters and many congressmen do not yet know the answers to these questions:

1. Is United States naval and air power needed or contemplated for use in Indochina?
2. Does France plan to give Indochina true independence?
3. Are Russian and Chinese Communists involved in the war in Indochina?

Fifth Column In UN Said Operating

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate investigators say a Communist "Fifth Column" which includes some Americans is operating within the United Nations Secretariat and "brings into serious question" the work of U.N. agencies.

The Senate Internal Security subcommittee, reporting Saturday, recommended that "evidence of Soviet use of international agencies ... as a cover for espionage on American soil" be sent to Secretary of State Dulles as a basis for a possible protest to Russia.

Reviewing an investigation for possible Communists among Americans on the U.N. staff, the nine-member subcommittee reported, "there are strong indications that this 'Fifth Column' also includes citizens of other non-Communist countries."

It urged President Eisenhower to instruct the American U.N. delegation "to press for thorough review of the entire U.N. personnel from non-Communist countries" and to "co-operate with delegations from such countries for the purpose of eliminating personnel who are Communists or subject to Communist discipline."

The report said that between Oct. 13, 1952, and April 27, 1953, 27 U.N. staff members—most of them former U.S. government employees—refused to answer questions about Communist connections on the ground of possible self-incrimination.

Forty U.N. employes have quit or been fired in connection with the loyalty investigation, started in 1952 and still incomplete. Of these, 21 appealed to the U.N.'s administrative tribunal which ordered 11 reinstated on the ground they were improperly discharged under existing rules.

After Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold refused to reinstate the 11, the tribunal directed the U.N. to pay them compensation totaling $189,370. The matter later was referred for settlement by the General Assembly to the World Court at The Hague after the United States, which would have to pay one-third of the compensation, balked.

McKay Rumor Said False

SEATTLE (AP) — A report that Secretary of the Interior McKay, concerned over possible political implications, sent an emissary to the Seattle Chamber of Commerce to try to delay a planned statement of policy on Northwest power was branded "absolutely false" Saturday.

Commenting on a story published by the Wenatchee World, a chamber spokesman said Raymond Davis, an assistant to McKay, met with chamber trustees prior to adoption of an 11-point power resolution last week.

But, said George M. Dean, chairman of the chamber's state development commission, "Davis made it perfectly plain he was not trying to tell the chamber to do anything."

The policy statement approved by the trustees last Tuesday urged the federal government to get out of the power business in the Northwest as soon as present projects are completed.

The World's frontpage story Saturday said the Interior Department, fearing political implications, sent Davis here from Washington, D.C., when it learned of the proposed policy statement. Davis recently was here on a trip to Alaska, where he addressed the
