Interest In Telecast Of McCarthy Hearing Lags

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Public interest in televised sessions of the McCarthy-Army hearings apparently lagged far behind the enthusiasm that crippled business and left household chores undone during the 1951 Kefauver crime hearings.

From city after city, where daily routines were stalled by the crime hearings, came reports that business was normal during the Washington telecasts.

Store owners there reported business was normal and some bars didn't even have the hearings turned on. Where sets were turned on, there was nothing like the mobs that gathered daily to watch the crime committee.

The strongest reaction was reported in Cleveland, where Euclid avenue merchants noticed a slackening of business for several hours during the afternoon.

Most reports agreed with one from Providence, R. I., saying yesterday's hearings had nowhere near the popular appeal of the Kefauver sessions.

In Dallas, Tex., a supermarket manager said he was aware of no drop in the number of shoppers. Tavern owners said their customers didn't even ask to have TV sets turned on.

In Detroit a department store had a set turned to the hearings but a spot check showed only 100 persons watching, compared to 100 persons who gathered for a recently televised baseball game.

In Chicago crowds gathered in bars and around display windows of TV stores, but downtown traffic was normal and an average shopping day was reported.

The Boston Globe telephoned TV owners at random and found only 5 of 25 were watching the hearings. Patrons in one Reno, Nev., horse parlor asked the owner to turn off the hearings. The noise, they said, interfered with concentration on form sheets.
