

MASSIE'S SASSY BOOTS and his handler, Roy Gonia, are shown following last weekend's Shasta Cascade annual spring retriever trials that were held at the Airport. Boots was judged the top dog in the Open-All-Age class that finished competition Sunday afternoon. William T. Cline, of Chicago, is the dog's owner, and Gonia is from McKenna, Washington.

Summer League Representatives Meet Tonight

George Condry, Joan Hill and Jack Kemnitzer have issued the first call for all team representatives of summer softball and baseball teams to be present at an organizational meeting to be held tonight in the City Hall at 7:30.

Condry will preside over the Men's Softball League, and Joan Hill will conduct the business at hand for the women's representatives. Kemnitzer is the supervisor of the summer recreational program for all of the basins' small city.

The junior, midget, and pee wee league representatives will meet with Kemnitzer and discuss possibilities for the coming season.

Bob Bonney, City Recreational Director, announced that there were to be two hardball leagues this year instead of one as in past years for the junior.

Any person wishing to sponsor a team in any of the summer leagues is asked to be present at tonight's meeting.

Sports Notes

LOTT COACHING NETMEN
DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — George Lott, regarded as one of the top doubles players in tennis history, is coaching the Duke University tennis team. Lott, who won 31 national and international titles, has replaced Robert Cox who now is director of tennis here.

AUSTRALIANS TO SWIM
VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — Australian swimmers competing in the Empire Games here July 30-Aug. 7. Among those from Australia who will compete are Jon Henricks, 18; Garry Chapman, 15; David Hawkins, 21; Cyrus Weld, 19; and Lorraine Crapp, 15.

BROOKLYNITE SWITCHES
LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Joe Mastrogiovanni, 1953 sophomore tailback for the University of Wyoming eleven, will switch to blocking back this fall. Mastrogiovanni is a 5 foot 6 Brooklynite weighing 195.

TEAMS TOO SPEEDY
CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — This is not the place for fast basketball teams unless the players are on the basketball court. Within a month drivers of automobiles bearing George Washington University's name and players with the Harlem Globetrotters were arrested for speeding.

Al Foot rode the winners of four steeplechase stakes during the 1953 Belmont Park meeting.

Twinsway Moving captured both ends of team action last night in the Transportation League by rolling a 951 game and a series score of 2713 pins.

Interstate Waterboys wound up second best in both team events with their line of 927 and a pin series of 2970.

Individual action was led by Ivan Bold, who posted a 599 series on lines of 231-190-178. His 231 game was also high in league action for last night.

Harry Bray and Jim Floyd took runnerup spots behind Bold. Bray had a 568 score for series, and Floyd had a 223 second spot game score.

As the season is drawing to a close, Modoc Building seems to have the team title sewed up.

The University of Washington Huskies, who received a severe pasting from Oregon State in Northern Division baseball play last week, took it out on hapless Oregon Monday.

The Huskies clubbed out five home runs, including two by catcher Jack Ballard, to rout the Ducks 18-2.

In another conference game, at Moscow, Idaho, the Washington State Cougars shoved Idaho's weak Vandals deeper into the cellar, 8-3.

The Washington runs column got considerable help from Oregon batters, who could manage only six hits off Husky hurler Don Hill, and Duck pitchers, who gave up 16 hits and 12 walks.

Trailing, 3-2, going into the eighth frame, WSC broke loose for three runs as sophomore Wgs Stock turned in a yeoman relief trick to hand the Vandals their seventh straight loss in conference play.

Big Ten Conference football squads are limited by CAA regulations to 20 spring practice sessions in a 36-day period.

Boston Outfielder Starts Fast In Home Run Derby

By JIMMY BRESLIN
NEA Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK (NEA)—Boston's Red Sox, probably figuring that Ted Williams talks enough for all of them, are playing it soft when the subject of Jackie Jensen's fast start is brought up.

Jensen, the big blond who was brought to Fenway Park to give the Sox some pennant power from the right side of the plate, belted four fast home runs with two of them producing victories over the Yankees and Athletics.

At the outset of spring training, it looked as if Lou Boudreau and Company made the wrong move in trading Mickey McDermott, an 18-game winner, and speedy Tom Umphlett for Jensen. But on the way north, the former California back walloped the Braves' pitching for a .447 mark and ended the grapefruit season with .326.

Jensen didn't stop once they began playing for keeps and more than took advantage of the left field wall at Fenway, rapping three over it.

"We'll just wait and see on Jensen," Boudreau says. "It's too early for me to give an opinion on anything. As far as Jensen is concerned, I'll hold off until he's had a look at everybody around the league. And they've had a look at him, too."

The Red Sox gave up a lot for the former California griddler and one inanimate object probably will have as much to do with making or breaking them than any pitcher in the league.

That would be, of course, The Wall, Boston's answer to a handball court. The sign at the bottom of the left field fence at Fenway Park says it is 315 feet from home plate, but when a right hand batter digs in, the thing seems practically on top of him.

Until last season, the Sox were almost unbeatable at home, but floundered badly on the road. The fence, you see, is not portable. Fellows like Walt Dropo, now with the Tigers, hurt themselves seriously outside of Fenway by trying to hit as if they were at home.

Jensen insists he hasn't altered his stance to get cozy with The Wall.

"I'm swinging the same as I did last year. I only hit one homer in Boston last year and I haven't done anything at all to try for the wall exclusively," he said.

Boudreau concurs. "Naturally, a guy is going to be thinking of putting one out there, particularly if he's a right-hander," the Sox boss points out.

"But nothing has cropped up in Jensen's swing so far that shows he's thinking too much about it. You've got to give that some time. If something does crop up—if, as you ask, he winds up pull crazy—then we'll put in some corrective measures. There are a lot of parks in this league."

While Jensen's early season work has been a bright spot for the Sox, it's strictly in the nature of a bonus. His big value

—and the jury hasn't even arrived to debate on this one—should come somewhere around May 15.

That's when Mr. T or the Splendid Splinter or what-have-you, otherwise Ted Williams, puts his big frame in the lineup and Boudreau inserts Jensen behind him in the batting order.

That will give Jackie all the chances he needs to refute claims that he leaves too many guys on base.

Senators Trip Sacramento 6-4

SALEM, Ore. (AP)—The Salem Senators of the Western International League made the most of nine hits here Monday as they downed Sacramento of the Coast League, 6-4, in an exhibition baseball game.

The Senators started fast with two runs in the first only to have the Sacs explode for four runs in the third on four singles, an error and a hit batsman.

Salem put across one run in the bottom of the second, went ahead with two more in the third and clinched the win with a singleton in the fifth.

Sacramento 010 000 000—4 8 2
Salem 212 010 000—6 9 2
Reynolds, Patrick (3) and Par-tee; Johnson, Domenichelli (4), Briggs (7) and Ogden, Heinser (7).

SHORT COUNT—The United States Golf Association says it's OK for women to wear shorts, but local rules prevail. That won't make Marlene Bauer, left, don the same garb Glenna Collett sported in the early 1920s.

"Competition is the life of trade"

Competition helps improve service to customers

YOU TRADE at stores that give you satisfactory service and dollar value. You buy those things which best serve your needs. As a result there is constant striving among manufacturers and retail stores to win your trade by offering better service and product value. Competition is becoming keener as our economy regains its stability, and supply of goods catches up with demand. In the building field, for example, there is a growing list of materials that compete with lumber. The lumber industry must meet this competition by maintaining its high standard of quality and service to customers. Further, we must continue to improve manufacturing efficiency and develop new and better products so that we can always meet competitive prices.

It is important to everyone in the Pacific Northwest that the lumber industry compete successfully for its share of the building market, because more than half of the economy of this region is dependent upon the forest industry. Successful competition means steady operation and employment in our industry, sound communities, and a stable tax base to support schools and other necessary government activities.

Wood's beauty lends itself to modern merchandising

Wood, with its warmth and other naturally pleasing characteristics, helps store owners meet competition. It makes possible beautiful, economical modernization of store buildings inside and out as demonstrated in the picture above. Architects, builders and decorators prefer wood because it is easily adapted to so many designs and types of construction and is easily decorated, using natural wood grain finishes or easy-to-change colorful paints. However, for continued success in meeting competition, the forest industry must repeatedly remind people of the outstanding merits of wood. Remember, wood must compete with them all : : : brick, concrete, aluminum, glass, plastics, compositions and steel.
