McCarthy Army Fight Cost Told

WASHINGTON (AP) — The McCarthy-Army hearings are costing hundreds of dollars a day, but what the total bill will be no one professes to know. For one thing, no one knows just how long they'll last. Sen. Mundt (R-SD), presiding over the hearings as acting chairman of the Senate investigations subcommittee, was asked for an estimate of the cost. "I haven't the foggiest idea," he said. However, he said the subcommittee had only three expenses—the salaries of its special five-man staff, the cost of the official transcript of the testimony and the transportation of witnesses from out of town. He did not include the salaries of the seven subcommittee members and of the principals to the dispute—Army officials and Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis.). Special Counsel Ray H. Jenkins and members of his staff are being paid at a rate of about $225 a week each. This adds up to a weekly payroll of about $1,125—for however many weeks the probe continues. Roughly 13,000 words of testimony are going into the record daily, or about 125 pages a day with 240 words to the page. For the number of copies of the transcript it receives, the subcommittee pays $1.07 a page. This expense adds up to slightly under $200 a day. Mundt said he had not received any bills from witnesses subpoenaed from out of town and so could not estimate how much this expense would amount to. He did say, however, that the Army was paying the expenses of its own witnesses so far as he knew. He said he specifically arranged with the Army that the subcommittee would not be charged with the expense of bringing Maj. Gen. Miles Reber back from Germany. Reber was the first witness called by the Army. At the Pentagon, officials said the cost of flying him from Western Germany to Washington was $433, and that this was being charged to the Army. Joseph N. Welch of Boston, special counsel retained by the Army for the probe, announced when he took the job that he and his two assistants would serve without pay. He said he had no idea that the Army's expenses for the investigation would be. Nor would Pentagon officials hazard an estimate.

ALTURAS
By Mrs. Guy Young
Mrs. Charles Thurman, district director of Klamath district garden clubs; Mrs. Will Wood, state and district year book chairman; Mrs. Scott McKendree, district flower show school chairman, and Mrs. Sybil Hill, president elect of the Malin Garden Club were guest speakers at the April 15 meeting of the Alturas Garden Club. Mrs. Thurman spoke on club organization and committee work. Mrs. Wood spoke on the imporance of year books; Mrs. McKendree on the proposed flower show school to be held in Klamath Falls, and the benefits derived from the school and Mrs. Hill spoke on the coming district meeting in Malin May 5. The meeting was presided over by the president Mrs. P. W. McKenney. The business session followed a buffet luncheon. Table decor carried out the Easter theme. During the business session, committee chairmen were appointed to plan for the Alturas Garden Club spring flower show. Mrs. Ralph Laird and Mrs. Clarence Ebbe will serve as general chairmen. May 28 or June 4 are tentative dates for the show, depending on weather conditions. Rules and classifications will be published later. Officers for the coming year are: Mrs. Phillip W. McKenney, president; Mrs. Kenneth Flourney, vice president; Mrs. Jack Chase, secretary-treasurer and Mrs. J. Forrest Doyle, program chairman.

TEA TOWELS STAINED, DINGY?

Here's easy way to keep them white:
Tea towels are so much nicer when they're white—really white! Yet it's impossible to keep them white with a soap or detergent alone. To have tea towels that are truly snowy and sanitary, give them this special PUREX treatment:
Make up a special washer load of all your soiled and stained tea towels. Include other white goods, if necessary, to make up a full load. When your load is ready, fill your washer, add soap or detergent and one cup of PUREX. Start washer, then put in your tea towels and wash. Allow full rinsing time.
You'll be delighted with the fresh, sweet-smelling snowy

Camera Chatter

"Frame's the Name!"
By DAL SWOGER
Framing, in the sense we will be talking about today, concerns the taking of your movies and stills; an added way of improving the interest value of your home movies and snapshots. To frame your picture use an object in the foreground to set off the subject in the background of your picture. For instance, in taking those landscapes of Crater Lake, you "frame" the lake through some large trees in the foreground. The point of framing your pictures is to add depth or that feeling of a third dimension and to help bring attention to the center of interest which, in the case of Crater Lake, is the lake itself. In taking those "family" vacation pictures, we can put this framing technique to very good use. Frame the vacation views with the family. Have sister standing in the foreground, looking at the subject of interest, such as a view of Klamath Falls looking down from the OTI road. Remember, that looking at the subject—not toward the camera, is the directive force. Frame your pictures to add interest and beauty to your home movies and snapshots. ## One Eye Patch Said Enough

BALTIMORE (AP) — One publicized eye patch may be all right in the Gabor family but not a second, Magda Gabor insisted yesterday after a doctor prescribed a patch for eye injury. Magda's sister, Zsa Zsa, caused a stir last December when she appeared in Las Vegas with a black patch over her right eye. She said she had been slugged by Porfirio Rubirosa, the much-married Dominican diplomat. Magda is now appearing here in a comedy, "Palama Tops." During rehearsal yesterday she complained of something in her eye. A quick trip to Mercy Hospital turned the trick of removing the foreign object and brought a prescription for an eye patch, a white one, which was taped in place. But when photographers ran for their cameras, Magda said no. "I refuse to capitulate on Zsa Zsa's patch," she said.
