Game Office Transferred

The Oregon State Game Commission announces the transfer of the northwest regional headquarters from Albany to the E. E. Wilson game management area effective May 1.

The new headquarters building is located approximately eight miles north of Corvallis, just off U.S. Highway 99W. The mailing address is Route 1, Box 325, Corvallis.

With the acquisition of the deed to new lands, the go-ahead was given for the move, which will provide better facilities than those presently being occupied at Albany. Also, the new location will serve to consolidate various commission stations and thus make for more economical operation.

This is one of the five regional offices of the commission in the state, and work carried on in the northwest part of Oregon is directed by regional supervisor Les Zumwalt whose headquarters are located here.

Though the move will officially be completed on the 1st of May, Zumwalt mentioned that the office will not be fully in smooth operation for a few days following. However, all correspondence should be sent to the new address.

Other regional offices in the state are at Bend, Roseburg, LaGrande and Hines.

City Ends Gas Light Era

KANSAS CITY — Kansas City, Mo., reputedly the last major city to use horse drawn fire equipment, ended its gas light era today.

Last of the gas street lights which have flickered along the city streets for nearly 100 years are being replaced by modern electric lights.

Some gas street lights will continue in use in parts of Kansas City, Kan., the twin metropolis just across the border to the west.

Kansas City had one horse drawn engine company in service on its fire department until the early 1930s. The horses were retained because they could negotiate the narrow, crooked streets in the stock yards vicinity easier than the huge modern motor driven equipment. Specially adapted equipment finally replaced them.

Strikes At New Post War Low

WASHINGTON — The number of labor strikes reached a post war low during the first quarter of this year, the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) said today.

It said the 800 strikes and 3,030,000 man days lost because of the stoppages from January through March was lower than any corresponding postwar quarter. There were 300,000 workers involved.

This compares with 1,276 strikes in January-March 1953 involving 550,000 workers and 3,720,000 man days of idleness.

Strike activity during the first quarter of this year was listed as 20 per cent lower than during the first quarter average for the 1947-48 period, with 60 per cent fewer workers involved and 50 per cent less idleness.
