Senator Urges Training Of Asians As Anti-Red Force

By RUSSELL BRINES
WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Mansfield (D-Mont.) said today that the "great contribution" being made by native troops in defending Dien Bien Phu shows that effective anti-Communist armies could be trained in Indochina.
Mansfield, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said approximately 4,700 Vietnamese and 1,500 Cambodians are among some 12,000 defenders of Dien Bien Phu, the besieged fortress in northern Indochina.
There is still time, he added in an interview, to build up anti-Red forces if the French make further concessions to independence demands.
Secretary of State Dulles was quoted by informed sources last night as having told a bipartisan group of 24 members of Congress that this country has no present plans to send any forces into the Indochina war. He met for 1 1/2 hours with them late yesterday.

But neither he nor the lawmakers commented publicly afterward.
Dulles was said to have reported that President Eisenhower regarded Indochina as a far worse place to involve American forces than was Korea. Vice President Nixon has said this country may have to send in combat troops in what he called the unlikely event the French withdrew.
Dulles reportedly told the secretaries of the Senate and House in a session he plans to go ahead with his plans for "united action" to protect Southeast Asia from Communist conquest.
The secretary was said to have told the congressmen that some thought is being given to the drawing of a defense line around the Indochina states of Laos and Cambodia and pledging the United States and Allied nations to defend them against aggression.
They are less heavily involved in the seven-year-old war than is the larger state of Viet Nam, where rebel troops led by Moscow-trained Ho Chi Minh are punishing the French and native forces.
The informants said that Dulles, in making this point, stressed that the United States has not given up all hope of holding Viet Nam against the Reds.
Mansfield, who did not attend the Dulles briefing, said it is not generally known that so many native troops are in the Dien Bien Phu battle.

"About 60 per cent of the men being parachuted into the fort also are Vietnamese," he said. The remainder of defensive forces are French, African troops and Foreign Legionnaires.
The senator, who has visited Indochina, said the current monsoon rains should provide a military breathing spell of about six months to continue training and building up an anti-Communist army.
"But it is imperative, if this is to be done, that the French give the three Associated States an independence date that is certain and give them the right to decide whether to join the French Union," he said.

St. Lawrence Seaway Bill Causes Stir Among Cities

By SAM DAWSON
TOLEDO, Ohio (AP)—The St. Lawrence seaway — when and if it opens all the legal and political rapids and becomes an ocean freighter carrying reality — is counted upon today to stir a wave of activity along mid-America's waterfronts.
It would also be a swiftest stirring up many parts of the economy elsewhere.
Already under way along the Great Lakes are plans for port authorities with taxing powers, for extensive building of docks, for harbor dredging and for routing of incoming and outgoing goods and farm products. Looming is a scramble among the states and cities to lure new industries.
Opponents of the plan to turn Great Lakes cities into fresh-water seaports have contended the seaway would injure many existing transportation systems, give foreign businessmen a chance to land their goods more cheaply in the Midwest and undercut American manufacturers.
The seaway plan calls for a ship canal to eliminate the final bottleneck — a 115-mile stretch of the St. Lawrence between Ogdensburg, N. Y., and Montreal, Canada. It would take about five years to do and would then furnish a 27-foot-deep (at the shallowest) waterway 2,347 miles long from Duluth, Minn., at the farthest tip of Lake Superior, to the Atlantic Ocean. Its advocates say the majority of the world's freighters could use it. Rivalry along the way will be keen.

Toledo says that, granted the port authority law it's asking of the Ohio State Legislature, it plans to become the foremost western terminal. It contends it is the first lake port free of ice in the spring and the last to be closed in the fall. Also it argues that the long waterhaul from Toledo to Chicago may not be as economical as the short overland distance between the two cities. Toledo has ordered a survey of harbor possibilities.
Detroit is debating building its channel and building docking facilities for the larger freighters that would admit.
Cleveland reports its export business last year came to $60 million dollars. Its businessmen talk confidently of doubling that — some even say tripling it — within a few years after the seaway is completed. They count on cheaper transportation rates giving Midwest manufacturers a sales advantage. They talk of the seaway "pulling" Pittsburgh closer to Cleveland and away from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore or Hampton Roads.
Milwaukee is credited by many of its lake port rivals with having been foresighted in developing its waterfront for the seaway's expected coming.
Minnesota grain traders point out that much of the spring wheat already goes either to Milwaukee or to Duluth and Superior for water transportation to the flour mills at Buffalo. Only grain for export would be affected by the seaway and they think much of it might continue to go down the Mississippi on barges.

Minnesota iron miners, who ship their ore down the lakes to the ports nearest the steel mills, fear the St. Lawrence seaway would open a cheap way in for competing ore, to be coming soon from Labrador and Quebec — and even from Venezuela.
But the steel companies in Ohio and around Pittsburgh are eager for the Labrador ore. If they can't get it through by water to the Atlantic Seaboard steel mills — and attract more of them there and away from the Midwest.
Visit the ports on the Atlantic and Gulf seaboard (as this reporter recently did) and you'll find most of them, as well as the railroads that serve them, fearful of what the seaway would do to them, their foreign trade and their industries.
New Orleans and Houston shippers, however, think they'll retain most of their present business. They point out they're open while the Great Lakes rivals are closed by ice.
And, right now, New Orleans is more interested in getting federal funds for a project to keep the Mississippi from returning to its ancient channel. If it did, New Orleans might be left high and dry, with Old Man River staying away from her door.
