BILLBOARD

By BILL JENKINS
A. B. Collins blew into town a few days ago with a quickie review for the home folks of his travels in the south. Outstanding thrill of the trip, says A.B., was a false alarm he got at a policeman's ball where they were holding a drawing for a new car.

Seems A.B. had a listful of tickets on the thing and when the tab came out of the barrel the snice announced the winner was a man from Oregon.

Collins promptly dashed front and center to drive off in his prize, only to find it was another Oregonian that held the lucky number.

He was so disgruntled he didn't even get the chap's name.

Things are looking up.
A Paisley girl has come off top winner in the scholastic honors division at the University of Portland. Miss Hannah O'Leary, a nursing student, will be valedictorian of the senior class with a GPA of 3.87.

They grow 'em smart over Paisley way. Congratulations and all good luck to Miss O'Leary.

Deer hunters might be interested to know that Lake County led the state in the number of deer killed with a total of 8489 deer bagged by eager hunters. Klamath County was second with a total of 7940 killed and Lane county came in third with a figure of 6424.

In case anyone is interested in what happened to the rest of this column, the answer is easy. I've gone fishin'.

Of interest to anglers is the news from the state police that 5031 rainbows were planted Monday in Crescent lake, most of 'em between seven and eight inches.

ALONG NATURE'S TRAIL by KEN McLEOD

Yesterday, our column was following the wild events of the first outbreak of the Modoc War, and our group of citizens sent out from Linkville to warn the settlers of the outbreak of Indian warfare had reached the Clear Lake Ranch the third evening after the outbreak of hostilities on Lost River, where were congregated at the Clear Lake Ranch, the families of Jesse Applegate, Applegate with characteristic energy immediately formulated plans for the construction of a stockade the next morning, December 3, 1872.

Stearns writes: "The next morning we left two of our party to assist Mr. Applegate in the construction of the stockade and accompanied by Henry Applegate and Charles Putnam, 'Uncle' Jesse's grandson, we pursued our way towards Tule Lake, following the old emigrant trail most of the way. When we came over the ridge overlooking Tule Lake about three-fourths of a mile from the Brotherton ranch, we saw two women and a boy and a girl in front of the house who seemed to be regarding our advance apprehensively, as we could distinguish a gun in the hand of one of the women. As we came near, the woman handed the gun to one of the children and came toward us wringing her hands and crying. Between her spells of sobbing we gleaned the story of the killing of her family as far as she knew it.

"According to her story, the Indians did not do their murderous work in that locality until the morning of the day after the killing of the Boddy family. Being doubtless afraid of pursuit, they had passed the interim in some secluded place overlooking the valley, while, seeing no attempt was made by the troops to follow them up, and that the settlers were unaware of any trouble, they came out of their hiding place and fell on the Brothertons and Henry Miller who lived a few rods away from the Brothertons across the state line. Some of the men were in the Junipers cutting wood. They were the first killed. Next Miller and a ten year old son of Mr. Brotherton, who were driving the teams hauling wood.

"Having killed all this party, they rode rapidly down where a German sheep herder, named Seever or Soover and another of the Brotherton boys were herding a band of sheep a little more than a quarter of a mile from the cabins and in plain view. Mr. Seever was mounted while the boy was on foot. Seeing the Indians rushing towards him with painted faces and brandishing arms, Mr. Seever put spurs to his horse and attempted to get away, circling first one way then another as the Indians headed him off, firing at him all the while until finally he fell from his horse.

CAUGHT IN THE ROUNDS

By DEB ADDISON
RETAIL MEMO:
At long last, good business news is overshadowing the bad, says Sales Management. Some examples:

- 1) Dr. L. J. Paradiso, chief statistician of the Department of Commerce reports total consumer spending in the first quarter of '54 increased by $2.3 billion at the annual rate; it roughly equalled that of 1954's last quarter.
- 2) D. Keizer, head of the economic department of the McGraw-Hill Publishing Co. said a survey in March showed industry expenditures for new plants and equipment would set a new high this year.
- 3) A survey by the Wall Street Journal indicates that 79 per cent of business economists venturing opinions think the downturn is leveling off; 25 per cent see no sign of it, and 5 per cent believe the economy has already taken a turn for the better.

Never did the Klamath Basin's farm income take such a drastic drop from one year to the next as it did from '52 to '53. BUT—Never have there been more acres of fertile soil so beautifully leveled and worked and planted as now; never has there been better know-how or better equipment on Klamath Basin farms to grow a new crop. SO—A good 1954 crop and a reasonable market would put the Basin back in Prosperity with that capital "P".

Home remodeling and fix-up results in at least $7.5 billion being spent for every $10 billion spent for new houses, it is estimated by W. Hoadley, economist for Armstrong Cork Co. in Building Supply News.

During 1954, surveys show that one home owner in five plans a major expenditure to improve housing. Hoadley said there are three things needed to tap this huge market:

- 1) Longer term financing.
- 2) Better coordination of trades and service required.
- 3) "Home Fix-Up Centers" operated by local dealers where the public can get all the help needed for their repair-remodeling projects.

Telling The Editor

TOO MUCH
I understand our Mayor is planning to out plan the State High Way Commission and necessitate spending quite a sum of the taxpayer's money. Just how much he does not make quite clear. $183,000 has been mentioned as a start-up for the new truck route through town. Why the sum of $183,000 has been carried out is admittedly apt to be by-passed will be the new golden truck route, made of taxpayer's gold.

No doubt the trucking companies would be pleased with such a street built especially for them but it does seem to have a pretty high price attached. I think it should be made clear to the individual just what the cost will be to him in additional taxes. Klamath Falls at the present time is one of the highest taxed cities in the state.

It should also be made clear to those confused that the new truck route has no connection with the sixth street over pass. This project has been allotted for this project and construction will start in the not too far future.

Respectfully,
Fern Short

The Doctor Says

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M. D.
When I was a boy, I was crossing a brook one day on a fallen log and tumbled into the water.

That evening all the signs of a bad cold began to develop, and I was properly scolded and warned by my father of the dangers of catching cold from falling in the water.

The next day my skin broke out in a gorgeous rash. I had the measles. Thereafter my father was fond of telling the story as a typical example of mistaken diagnosis.

There are two aspects of this unimportant incident to which I should like to draw my readers' attention. The first is that an event or accident is not always responsible for the physical symptoms which develop thereafter.

It is true that if one is in an automobile accident and breaks a leg there is a definite cause and effect; it is not always true, however, that the development of some symptom, such as indigestion, or what appears to be indigestion, is the result of a particular food.

Physicians must always be alert to the possibility that something which appears to be the cause of some physical symptom coming thereafter may really have nothing to do with it.

The second point is perhaps even more important. The symptoms which a person has often can develop from any one of several different underlying conditions. For example, a nosebleed can come from being hit on the nose, from an ulcer in the nose, from high blood pressure or from several other things, some of which are important and some not.

The same thing applies to other symptoms, such as headache, loss of weight, digestive upsets and almost anything else you can name.

The particular reason this is important is that people who have only a little knowledge (or read one of these columns and learn about the symptoms of some particular disease) may jump to the conclusion that because they have the same symptoms they have the disease being discussed.

Sometimes I have been alarmed by letters written to me indicating that the reader of a column has diagnosed a disease in himself or herself because the symptoms were similar to those mentioned.

This is by no means a safe conclusion, and I hope that in the future readers will realize that symptoms must be studied in the light of physical findings and laboratory tests, all interpreted on the basis of years of medical study.

Store Sued By Dallas Woman

DALLAS (AP)—A woman sued a variety store for $2,800 yesterday, charging she had been "burned" by a set of "artificial rubber bust forms."

She claimed the articles contained chemicals which became soluble when she perspired and caused her to become "poisoned, burned and injured."

Letter From Washington

By HARRIS ELLSWORTH, M. C., 4th District, Oregon
It would not be surprising if, by this time, a fairly high percentage of the people of our country believe that the work of the Congress is standing still while the much publicized McCarthy-Army hearings drone along. Actually that activity has practically nothing to do with the normal work of the Congress. Only those senators who feel obliged to sit at the hearing table are involved. The remainder of the senators and the members of the House are paying little attention to the hearing other than to follow it in the newspaper and perhaps, like I do, look at a re-run of the televised version on my TV set in the late evening.

In March I introduced in the House a companion bill to one sponsored by Senator Dworshak in the Senate. Its purpose is to permit the Commodity Credit Corporation, which has accumulated a large tonnage of hay and pasture seeds under the support program, to transfer some of the seed to the Forest Service, the Fish and Wildlife Service and the Bureau of Land Management. The purpose of such transfer is to allow those government land-administering agencies to improve pasture and feed areas which are owned by the government. I have heard of no objection to this idea. In fact, it is urged by the Department of Agriculture.

Last week the Senate passed the bill. I have now urged the legislative committee of the House to bring out the bill for consideration on the floor of the House. It is important that action on this legislation be taken soon if it is to be of any value this year.

The sub-committee on Public Lands of the House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, has reported the O & C controverted lands bill to the full committee. I am not informed as yet as to when the full committee will consider the report of the sub-committee but believe it may do so in the near future.

The assumption that the recent court decision has settled the entire controversy is not correct. Even if the decision is not appealed to the supreme court, the question of administration of the lands was not settled. Also the elimination of the checker-board pattern of government ownership which the bill provides is badly needed.

Progress on the problem of getting the various agency comments on the Talent Division Irrigation project report submitted to the Department of Interior, as required by law, is slower than anticipated. Meanwhile I have talked with the chairman of the sub-committee on irrigation and reclamation of the legislative committee who assured me that he will set a hearing date for the legislation early in June.
