BILLBOARD

By BILL JENKINS

A couple more fellows have been heard to take the oath over fishing. Wasn't more than a few days ago that we heard Ed Ostendorf, ex-mayor of our fair city and now retired, state that he was also retiring from the salmon fishing game.

Three days of dawn to dusk fishing in the rain and no fish seem to be the cause of it all. Understand that Hank Semon was also in the area and having the same kind of luck.

Oh well, there are plenty of trout streams around. It'll be a year or two before Ed can get around to swearing off everything.

Carl Steinmetz has also taken the veil in matters piscatorial. But for a different reason. Seems that last time he went out in search of the wary salmon he had pretty fair luck fishing, but his chances at the table weren't nearly so good. Seems the way, meaning a crowd of some three or four men, went to an expensive lodge and took in the fishing. But for dinner night after weary night they had the same old thing—boiled beef, with carrots and turnips on the side.

Fish in the rain all day and then come in to the dinner of boiled beef—with carrots.

Don't blame him for quitting either.

Unexpected company blew in for Grover Purdin early this week when he looked up from his lawn work and discovered his son, William, standing in the yard. Seems that Bill had just blown in unannounced on his way back to Wichita after a month's vacation. He's a CPA if that city and hasn't visited his dad, who lives at 1801 Ivory, for a good many years.

ALONG NATURE'S TRAIL

by KEN McLEOD

At the time Odense dispatched Ivan Applegate from Linkville to summon military aid from Fort Klamath he also dispatched James Brown, his special messenger, on the mission of notifying the settlers who were likely to be endangered in case of an engagement with the Modocs. How imperfectly this was done has been revealed by history as it would appear that none of the settlers who should have been warned were contacted—at least this has been the supposition of many writers. Bancroft makes the statement that "Brown afterward said he knew nothing of any settlers below Crowley's farm, and that the men he notified said nothing about it."

Bancroft then goes on to comment: "The truth was that none comprehended the danger." We have arrived at one part of the Modoc story that is shrouded in confusion, this writer believes, after examining a number of narratives, that Brown's mission has never been truthfully revealed. It is my belief that his mission was not to warn the settlers but to recruit a posse of settlers to assist the Army in its effort to arrest Captain Jack and his leaders. Without this promised aid it is in all probability that Colonel Green would not have sent Jackson on the mission until he had the required reinforcements from the other posse of the district. This impression in regards to Brown's mission is not entirely accurate on the part of this columnist, because, as a child, he remembers Donald McLeod telling the story of how he was approached to join the party of private citizens that were going to help "round-up the Indians." Childhood memory does not retain a recollection as to whether McLeod ever said who asked him to join in the fun but from the record it would appear that Brown is the only logical individual to have done so. McLeod told the settlers he had enough trouble minding his own business.

Though Brown is said to have claimed to have gone only as far as Crowley's I have wondered whether or not if he did not go further, at least as far as Boddy's, it may be just a mere coincidence that in Mrs. Schira's narrative we find that her husband, Nicholas, had been down on the shore of Tule Lake that fateful morning shooting at "ducks," one wonders if those "ducks" had red skins instead of feathers. Unfortunately, the writers of the early records of the history of the Modoc War deliberately refrain from giving a complete list of names of the settlers who joined together to assist Jackson in his attempt to round-up the Indians. There appears to be agreement that there were at least 25 settlers in the posse, which would make a force of at least 60 white men present at the Lost River battle.

Mariners Club Holds Meeting

The Mariners Club of Malin Community Presbyterian Church honored the first and the most recent couples married in the church at its regular meeting June 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Emmet Lahoda were the first couple to marry in the church, 41 years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Dean Geist were the most recent.

Honored with a birthday cake was Mrs. Lahoda's mother, Mrs. Lumpl, who was 82 years old May 21.

Mrs. Marion Monfore and Mrs. George Milligan poured. Mrs. Carl C. DeMott was pianist; Mrs. Art Robinson, soloist.

The Rev. DeMott read again the marriage ceremony; Mrs. Hag Wilcox told the story of courtship. An evening of fellowship followed.

Present were Mr. and Mrs. George Smalley, Mr. and Mrs. Hag Wilcox, Mrs. Emma Wilson, Mrs. C. M. Kirkpatrick, Mr. and Mrs. George Milligan and son, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Whitmore and children, Mrs. Andrew Street, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Monfore, the Rev. and Mrs. Carl DeMott and Marie, Mrs. Art Robinson and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. R. Jill and son and Beth Denchion.

Barley Watering Advised Against

TULELAKE—Observations at the Tulelake Field Station indicate that the watering of frozen barley should be delayed until the new green shoot starts to grow again, according to Burt Hoyle. This may be from two to four days. If no sign of life is apparent after this time it may be wise to reseed.

Watering immediately after the frost usually slows down the re-growth and may actually hinder it. By watering as soon as possible, however, one may give the barley a boost; also protection against a possible new frost.

Frost Damage Control Told

TULELAKE—Of extreme importance to the barley industry in the Klamath Basin is the understanding and control of frost damage. The Tulelake Field Station was fortunate in having many tests under way and found that only irrigation either at planting time or when the barley was 2 to 3 inches high was of any value, according to Burt Hoyle, in charge of the station.

Chiloquin High Holds Graduation

CHILOQUIN—The Rev. David Sutton, principal speaker, at the commencement exercises held here Wednesday evening, June 2.

Graduates this year are Ted Siemans, James Weddle, Allen Prowell, Twila Knightippe, Joan Ling, Frieda Kirk, Gloria Ochoa, Keith Anderson, Dona Clark, Leonard Oris, Jackie Barney, Jacqueline Schroeder Rossi, Gwendia Seaborn, Marcine Erickson, Edward Braulicht and Marvin Stubbfield.

The commencement program included: processional, S and a Hope; invocation, The Rev. Edmund Stanton; salutatory, Frieda Kirk; commencement address, The Rev. Sutton; valedictory, Ted Siemans; presentation of awards.

The PTA cup awarded annually to the outstanding senior for scholarship, character, citizenship, elective offices held and activities having teachers trained as Red Cross certified first aid instructors so that they in turn can teach first aid to their students.

Twenty places in the school will be reserved until June 15 to enable teachers to register for the work. The school is scheduled for August 22 to September 1.

Courses offered include swimming, life saving, water safety instructor, water safety instructor review, boating, canoeing, sailing, swimming pool leadership, camp waterfront activities, and first aid. If there is enough demand, additional courses will be offered in synchronized swimming and water ballet, competitive swimming and water therapy work with the handicapped.

Enrollment fee of $45.00 includes room and meals for the 10 days and instructional supplies; an additional fee of $18.00 will be made by the Oregon State System of Higher Education for teachers enrolling for university credit.

Application blanks may be had at the local Red Cross office, 108 Spring Street. Interested teachers should contact headquarters without delay in order to meet the June 15 deadline.

BPA Power Line Flops
An outage of power in the Bend-Redmond area serviced by Bonneville's 230,000 volt transmission line. Friday morning brought a call to the California Oregon Power Company here to furnish power over Bonneville's line to the outage area until repairs could be made.

This is the first time an attempt has been made to transmit power from Klamath Falls north over the new line. Copco officials stated, and the trial, resulted in some slight variations in voltage in this district. The local plant furnished power to the Bend district from 8 to 10 a.m. When tests have been completed a switch of this type will be made without any voltage disturbance in this area, asserted Sam Ritchey, district manager for Copco.

TREMOR
NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP)—A sharp earth tremor, the second in 36 hours, shook the Paphos area of western Cyprus Saturday. It lasted only three seconds and no damage or casualties were reported.

Bill Olson Winner Of Scholarship

TULELAKE—The $200 Hugh Wilson scholarship, given this year for the first time, in memory of the young Tulelake West Point cadet, who lost his life in a plane crash three years ago while enroute to the sale of the small book, "History of the Modoc War," published last summer.

Winner of the scholarship was Bill Olson, graduating senior of Tulelake high school.

The attractive volume was compiled by the PTA of the Tulelake High School to include a thesis on the war, written during Olson's freshman year which was highly commended by West Point officials. Also included is a map of the war area and pictures of participants in the war.

Red Cross Plans School

Teachers attending the Lake of the Woods aquatic school of the American National Red Cross, may earn three hours of university credit by securing their first aid instructor certificate at the school. The Oregon State Department of Education is desirous of having teachers trained as Red Cross certified first aid instructors so that they in turn can teach first aid to their students.

Twenty places in the school will be reserved until June 15 to enable teachers to register for the work. The school is scheduled for August 22 to September 1.

Tulelake: E. L. Coyer, Tulelake high school principal; Mrs. George Fischer, president of the PTA this year; D. M. Crawford, president of the Rotary Club and a member at large, Mrs. Margaret Jamison.

The scholarship will be granted annually, according to PTA plans, with the possibility that the amount may be increased in other years.

More than half the original printing of 1500 copies have been sold at $1 each. Publication costs have been paid from the proceeds. Present funds guarantee the presentation of scholarships in other years.

The fund idea originated with Mrs. G. W. Aikens of the PTA. Hugh Wilson was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Wilson Sr. and was flying back to school after a visit with his parents here during the holidays when he lost his life.

Piano Course Offered
Persis Cox, Boston pianist and teacher will offer four half-day refresher courses for teachers and other pianists in Eugene, Wednesday, July 14 through Saturday, July 17 at the Eugene Woman's Club Building, 450 14th Avenue East.

Miss Cox, former faculty member of Smith College and Dana Hall Schools, and now of the Winsor School in Boston and editor of Bach Verklart, published by E. C. Schirmer, will concentrate on the basic problems confronting teachers of students of all ages, from the small child to the adult beginner.

She comes highly recommended by Dr. Stanley Chapple, Director of the School of Music at the University of Washington.

Those interested in attending this course may secure further information from the registrar, Mrs. A. A. York, 339 Arcadia Drive, Eugene.

Athena Wins Critic's Praise
Louis R. Guzzo, music critic of the Seattle Times paid tribute to the voice of Athena Lampropoulos, who recently sang "Leonora," in Beethoven's "Fidelio," presented by the University of Washington's music department.

In his review Guzzo said, "generally, the singers and orchestra responded admirably to the direction of Dr. Stanley Chapple. Honors for the evening went to Athena Lampropoulos for her outstanding vocal efforts in the role of Leonora. She met the demands of Beethoven with clarity, power and authority."

Athena is a junior at the university.
