Judge Ponders 'Riot' Case

A disorderly conduct case hung in the balance Monday while District Judge D. E. Van Vactor pondered whether one person can stage a riot.

The issue was raised by Attorney George Proctor, counsel for Dewitt Armstrong, 44, who was arrested by state police on a charge of disorderly conduct. The complaint by the district attorney's office stated that Dewitt, who is alleged to have beaten his wife, Lila, so severely she required hospital treatment, acted in a "riotous manner." Proctor, who filed a demurrer to the complaint, contends the state law holds that to constitute a riot, three or more persons must be involved. After hearing arguments by Proctor and Deputy District Attorney Robert Kerr, Judge Van Vactor took the matter under advisement. Armstrong, who was arrested May 10 is at liberty under $50 bail.

Parents Face Curfew Charge

Parents of four teenage girls, cited for violation of curfew, were assessed $25 each in Municipal Court this morning.

The parents appeared in court Saturday morning and pleaded guilty to the charge after city police had picked up the girls in the early morning hours. According to police reports, the girls had been warned earlier to go home. They were taken to the police station and placed under detention by juvenile authorities after 2:30 a.m.

Gordon E. Farmer, 24, Tokete Falls, was arrested with the girls. He posted $100 bail and asked time to enter a plea. Farmer has retained Attorney B. J. Goddard as his defense. The hearing is set for 4 p.m. today. "This is the first such case to reach Municipal Court in several months," Police Judge Frank Blackmer stated, "and it may not be the last if parents do not control their children." The judge pointed out that, since most crimes committed by and upon children occur in the early morning hours, children should be under the protection of their own homes. "Parents who are unable to control their children should discuss their problems with juvenile authorities," the judge said. The parents in violation of the curfew were Mrs. D. S. Johnson, 5715 Marlan Drive; C. E. Logsdon, 2315 Autumn; Eve Clark, 244 East Main; H. S. Prince, 5666 Independence.

Bodinet To Be Sentenced

Raymond J. Bodinet, 31-year-old Portland brickmason, is scheduled to appear Tuesday at 10 a.m. before Circuit Judge David R. Vandenberg for sentencing on a charge of larceny from a person growing out of a parlor house holdup and shooting last January. Bodinet was convicted last week by a Circuit Court jury. He was originally charged with armed robbery. Under instructions from the court, the jury was given the alternative charge of larceny from a person. Court officials pointed out that the prosecution failed to connect Bodinet with the gun he is alleged to have used in the holdup of Paula Benton and four other women at Myrtle's parlor house January 8. Therefore, the state was unable to prove the armed robbery charge. Bodinet was arrested in the parlor house after his partner in the holdup, Edwin Coyie, 28, also of Portland, was shot and killed by City Policeman James O'Neal.
