CAB Opens Hearing On NW Rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Civil Aeronautics Board investigation of proposed reductions in airline passenger fares between the Pacific Northwest and Alaska opened Monday.

The hearing, before Examiner James Keith, also involves other proposed changes in the fare structure, including different fares for different types of aircraft and free stopover privileges.

The investigation was initiated when Pacific Northern Airlines protested a proposal by Pan American World Airways for a reduced fare schedule between Seattle and Juneau which did not provide any additional charge for stopovers between the United States and Alaska.

Pan American also proposed reductions in passenger fares between Seattle and Fairbanks, Portland and Fairbanks, and between Portland-Seattle and Ketchikan-Juneau.

Alaska Airlines proposes a reduction in its Seattle - Fairbanks and Portland - Fairbanks fares.

In addition, Alaska Airlines is requesting a $15 one-way fare differential between its DC4 aircraft and Pan American's DC6B aircraft on flights between Portland and Seattle and Fairbanks.

New Jersey Builder Refuses To Testify To Committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — A N.J. builder Monday refused to testify before senators probing multi-million dollar "windfall" profits in FHA-insured apartment construction. He claimed his "rights" under the fifth amendment not to be a witness against himself.

Sidney Sarner, identified as the builder of a Linwood Park, Inc., N.J. apartment project, declined to answer any questions at all. But his attorney, George Marcus of Hackensack, N.J., criticized the Senate Banking Committee and accused its members of "shooting off" their mouths. He shouted at Sen. Capehart (R-Ind), committee chairman: "We did nothing wrong."

The Banking Committee is in the midst of a probe of all federal housing programs. Right now it is concentrating on an expired post-war apartment program under which builders could get loans insured by the FHA up to 90 percent of the estimated cost of the project.

Sarner was the third witness, but the first builder, to take the fifth amendment in the course of the hearings. The other two were ousted FHA officials Clyde L. Powell, former assistant commissioner in charge of rental housing projects, and Andrew Frost, former assistant state director projects, and Andrew Frost, former assistant state director of the FHA in New Mexico.

Another witness, Gustave M. Berne of Great Neck, Long Island, testified it was a "common understanding" in the FHA that builders of the projects "would be likely to end up" with windfall profits.

Berne said he netted a profit of $1,370,000 on construction of the Rockaway Crest Apartments he built in Far Rockaway, N.Y., and an additional one million dollars in increased land values. He still owns the project, built between 1949 and 1952 with FHA-insured loans totaling $14,486,000.

After Sarner refused to answer questions, his attorney leaped to his feet, his face flushed, and shouted at Capehart:

"We are unable to prove or disprove your innuendos. We are not going to permit you to publicize these matters and shoot your mouths off. We did nothing wrong."

Capehart banged his gavel for order.

Marcus complained that Capehart and William F. McKenna, special deputy housing administrator, had submitted statements to the press regarding testimony Sarner had given the committee in secret session. He submitted clippings from New Jersey newspapers which he said proved this had been done.

McKenna has identified the project as one which made more than a million dollars in profits which resulted from loans in excess of the costs.

A George Marcus was identified by McKenna as one of three stockholders in the project. Sarner and Ralph J. Solow were the other two.

Dulles To Attend Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Dulles will leave by plane Monday night for Paris to discuss Indochina truce negotiations with French Premier Pierre Mendes-France and British Foreign Secretary Eden.

The State Department said Dulles' surprise trip was arranged Monday in answer to another invitation by France's Premier, who has been urging the secretary to return to the Geneva Far East Conference.

Dulles will confer Tuesday afternoon and evening in Paris with Mendes-France and Eden "to discuss the work of the Geneva conference," said a brief announcement.

Press Officer Henry Snyder said he did not know whether Dulles would go on to Geneva to represent the United States at the showdown Indochina talks which resumed Monday after a two-week lull.

MEEET one of our new friends. For years he stuck to the same brand—and good beer it was, too. Recently he changed to Rainier, and naturally we were interested to hear him tell about it.

"Not much good at describing things," he said. "Just like the mellow taste Rainier has, that's all. The way there's no tang or bite. And the way it's mild in taste without being weak or watery. Well, I just like it that's all."

You may agree with our new friend when you try Rainier. It's the beer that's growing fastest in popularity.

Brewed the mellow way

Takes time—but it's worth it. Because Rainier's long stay in frosty ageing cellars gives it the mellowness you like.
