Back in 1927, telephone people demonstrated the first city-to-city TV, over a telephone line between Washington, D. C. and New York.

As TV grew, we equipped our radio relay and coaxial cable systems to carry programs from city to city... to meet the needs of broadcasters and the public.

Whether we're carrying TV cross-country—or serving the telephone in your home—we're constantly working to make our services ever more valuable to you.

Pacific Telephone works to make your telephone a bigger value every day

How telephone people are working in color TV. For some time now, the microwave radio relay and coaxial cable systems that carry your long distance calls have also been carrying black-and-white television programs. And long before color television made the headlines, telephone people were testing these circuits to see how well they'd work for color. This helped us develop the new equipment needed to handle color telecasts. Now some programs for public viewing are being carried in color from city to city over the Bell System's coast-to-coast network. And we're going ahead with plans to install the equipment needed to transmit color TV up and down the Pacific Coast. For it's telephone policy to look ahead—planning today—to meet your communications needs of tomorrow.
