A PHOTOGRAPHER'S KNOW-HOW and four separate flashes of bulbs at different angles resulted in this unique picture taken 20 feet down in Mushpot Cave in the Lava Beds National Monument. This cave is the result of a "burp" in warm lava flow of several centuries ago. Visitors to the cave will find cool, moist air, a damp gravelly floor and a screen for "stills" on bird life, flowers, minerals and other interesting information in the monument. Lectures are given each Sunday afternoon by P. Quentin Tomich, ranger-naturalist. Seats are comfortable and the cave is reached by a short flight of steps. This is only one of 293 known caves in the area. Of this number, 40 have been developed for the public.

Army Parades Top Division

FT. BRAGG, N. C. (AP)—The Army massed its elite outfit, the 82nd Airborne Division, for a dress review to show Pentagon officials today a mobile striking force.

To the approximately 17,500 men of the famous airborne division, the Army added several thousand supporting troops and some of its newest atomic weapons, including a six-gun battalion of 280 mm. nuclear cannon, two batteries of the " Honest John " heavy rocket weapon and two tank battalions.

The review and demonstration was set up for top Washington officials invited to Ft. Bragg, among them Deputy Secretary of Defense Robert B. Anderson, Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens and the Army chief of staff, Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, the latter a World War II commander of the 82nd. Secretary of Defense Wilson canceled plans to attend so he could go to the Detroit funeral of a former associate.

Only rarely is a full Army division assembled for a formal review, an occasion which takes weeks of planning and days of equipment polishing. It takes hours just to parade almost 18,000 men, their trucks, jeeps, weapons carriers, tanks and guns past a reviewing point.

But the Army plans were not confined to a mere formal parade. They scheduled also an actual, capsule demonstration of the "vertical envelopment" technique of the modern battlefield, assigning a battalion (about 800 men) to stage a parachute drop of troops and heavy equipment.

The 82nd Airborne is virtually the only one of eight divisions in the United States at full strength and equipped for going into action immediately. With full strength and high mobility, it thus represents virtually the core around which would be deployed to any point in the world in a new and serious emergency.

Lost Angler Found Alive

NORTH BEND, Wash. (AP)—A Seattle fisherman, lost for nine days in the primitive Cascade Mountains 13 miles southeast of here, was found alive yesterday, weary and hungry but otherwise unharmed.

Bearded James Stolberg, 31, a Navy veteran who has a 70 per cent disability rating because of arthritis, said he wandered some 30 miles over brush-covered mountains with nothing but berries and small fish to eat.

He left his Seattle home July 4 on a fishing trip. When his car was found parked on the Sunset Highway near an old fire trail July 5, a massive search began.

Stolberg said he had followed the fire trail to its end and had started through dense brush toward the trail leading to Mason Lake. He lost his bearings and when found was some 16 miles from the lake.

His wife Ann had the final word: "He's not going fishing again—except in the bathtub at home. That is, not unless he takes me along."

Mary Pickford Leads Busy Life Despite Retirement

By HUBBARD KEAVY
 (For Bob Thomas)

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—This is a success story—the success being Mary Pickford's ability to keep busy and happy in retirement and to grow old gracefully. She is nearing 61, but looks years younger.

There are two deep perpendicular ridges between her eyes—signs of exactingness, nothing else. She has a slight mid-section roundness that comes to all of us eventually, but I'd guess she weighs only 10 or 15 pounds more than she did 20 years ago when she retired.

What does she do to keep happy? She gives a lot of time and energy, and money, too, to charities, principally Catholic and Jewish although she is of neither faith. She is active in civic affairs. She gets letters and calls nearly every day asking her to lend her name to this or that. She won't be a letterhead member of any committee.

"Unless I can really give time to a movement, I won't lend my name. Names do not mean a thing, but a good solid committee meeting does."

She runs a big house, the famed Pickfair. There are several servattraction. "It would give me something further to do," she said. "There could be reproductions of interiors of stars' homes—my living room, Will Rogers' dining room. Or would they be more interested in her boudoir?"

The modern midget of Owens Valley

There's a little old Gold Rush railroad at the eastern foot of the High Sierra. It's part of the Southern Pacific system. It lies between Mount Whitney, highest point in the U. S., and Death Valley, the lowest. It's one of the few surviving narrow-gauge lines left in America, and it's 71 miles long. It's also an important factor in the economy of the area it serves.

Like the rest of Southern Pacific, it's going modern in a big way—with a brand new, made-to-order little Diesel locomotive. This replaces the tiny steam engines which ran the road for years. They're heading for the last roundhouse.

So sometime this fall, the people who live in the area will hear a new sound—the sturdy purr of a small but powerful narrow-gauge Diesel engine, only one-tenth the size of our regular Diesel giants.

This new little locomotive is just a tiny part of Southern Pacific's modernization program. In fact, we've ordered a total of 1,349 Diesel units since the war. That averages about one unit every two days—an investment of almost $215,000,000 in new engines alone.

Diesels haul trains more smoothly, saving wear and tear on tracks; they can pull heavier loads; and they can make longer runs on less fuel, without stops for watering or servicing.

In short, they help offset increasing operating costs—which, whether you're a passenger, shipper or consumer, eventually benefits you.
