

Big Welcome Given Irish Nationalist

POMEROY, Northern Ireland — Sure, it was a glorious fight — but the Union Jack still fluttered today over Pomeroy. But you should have seen the place last night about the time Liam Kelly was being welcomed home from jail. He's the local hero of the nationalists, who want to wrest Northern Ireland from the British crown and join it up with the Irish Republic. He had been spending a year in the Belfast goal for making seditious remarks last year about Queen Elizabeth II. This was when he was campaigning for a seat in the Northern Ireland Parliament.

But yesterday Kelly's term was up and he headed for home. His nationalist friends camped on the edge of Pomeroy to give him a big welcome and escort him into town. Three hundred North Irish cops with guns stood by just in case of trouble.

As the word was passed along that Kelly was coming, bonfires were touched off on the hill. The nationalists formed a parade to march him to his home and hoisted the green, white and gold flag of the Irish Republic.

The police ordered them to strike the flag when they started down Pomeroy's main street. The nationalists paid nary a heed and marched into the cordon of 80 police strung across the road.

The police charged with their shillelaghs and broke up the parade. The nationalists retreated to the churchyard with 20 wounded, then armed themselves with stones and bottles.

"Stand firm, boys," a leader shouted, "now let 'em have it." The nationalists charged back into the fray. They beat off police trying to grab the flag, but another attack by the police clubs finally sent them reeling.

The fighting petered out then, and the village hotel was turned into a casualty station for the night. The able-bodied, including Kelly, went home to bed.

He's quite a fellow, actually. He won the seat he was campaigning for last year in Northern Ireland's Parliament. While in jail, he also was elected to the Irish Republic's Senate. He was sworn into office in his jail cell last week, by special permission of the British.

Australian Operatic Star Angry Over Film Biography

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD — MGM expects to start a film on the life of Marjorie Lawrence next week despite threats from the singer that she will sue to stop it.

The Australian operatic star's bitterness with the studio broke into the open today with charges and replies over the handling of her film biography. It is called "Interrupted Melody" and will star Eleanor Parker and Glenn Ford.

Miss Lawrence's principal complaint is that the studio will not use her own voice for the sound track. At her home in Hot Springs, Ariz., she declared the studio had her make extensive recordings with a symphony orchestra. "Everyone agreed they were superb," she said, adding that later the sound tracks were "sabotaged" to make her sound like "singing through a bale of cotton."

Jack Cummings, producer of the picture, denies any sabotage. "This is a very unfortunate situation," he remarked. "The last thing in the world I want is to hurt Miss Lawrence's feelings. First, we hired the noted conductor Erich Leinsdorf to record with her and a full orchestra. We did everything we could with microphones and so forth. But still the results were not suitable for use on a movie sound track.

"In hopes that we were wrong, we ordered a second session, at considerable expense. This time we hired Dr. Walter Ducloux, head of the opera department at USC and one of the 10 top operatic experts in the country. Again the recordings fell short. In order to keep the dramatic value of the story, we were forced to use another voice. We were heartbroken.

"Miss Lawrence was stricken with pain. We feel compassion for her, but we have done everything we can."

Cummings said MGM paid singer Eileen Farrell 50 per cent more than her agreed salary to do the recordings anonymously, thus saving Miss Lawrence embarrassment. "If she hadn't raised a fuss, no one would have known her voice wasn't used," Cummings said. "She would have profited handsomely. I offered her a tour with the picture when it opened around the country. She would be paid an excellent salary. But she refused and said she would sue to stop the picture."
