High-wire artists ride a telephone cable. Swaying some 50 feet above the swirling Columbia River, this cable is part of our long distance network that links the Pacific West with the East. It's one of the longest such spans in the world. And steady-nerved telephone people cross it regularly in the cable buggy above. Their job is to spot potential trouble before it affects your service. In this way, these "high-wire artists" help keep your calls going through. They also help hold down the price of your service—by fixing trouble before it grows costly. Pacific Telephone works to make your telephone a bigger value every day.

Kunze came home on the Victor H. S. Montana. He was employed by the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation before entering the service. Mrs. Kunze remained in Klamath Falls during his stay overseas.
