Cattlemen Hold Meeting

About 250 cattlemen and their wives attended the barbecue and meeting held at the Main Park Thursday. The meet was co-sponsored by the Modoc and Klamath County Cattlemen's Associations.

Principal topic of discussion was the brand laws of the two states which creates a financial burden on cattlemen who move stock back and forth across the state line in order to take advantage of different pasture seasons. Cattle moved from Oregon to California cost 30 cents per head and when cattle are returned from California to Oregon another fee of 11 cents is charged.

Brand inspectors from both states told cattlemen there is nothing they can do under the present laws but enforce them. They suggested that new brand laws should be legislated permitting a cattle along the state line to move to summer pastures and return to winter feed lots for a lesser fee.

Roy Nelson, Oregon state brand inspector informed the group that there is a provision in the law permitting a refund on cattle originating in Oregon, transferred to California for pasturing and then returned again to Oregon.

Beef promotion material is now on hand, this consists of recipes and numerous posters. Featured in the recipes are various ways for cooking beef stew which permits the use of the more plentiful cuts of meat.

It was announced at the meeting that September 15 to October 15 will be declared beef and vegetable month in Oregon.

President of the California Cattlemen's Association, Jake Schneider, was the main speaker. J. E. Cecil, president of the Oregon association was unable to attend having been called to Denver to attend a national beef promotion meeting.
