Strategy room—here top management people gather to direct company operations during emergencies.

Special maps show the locations of all our long distance lines, help telephone people plan alternate routes for calls.

Good service, reliable service—we're constantly planning ahead to make sure you can count on your telephone whenever you need it.

Pacific Telephone
works to make
your telephone
a bigger value
every day

"Nerve center" for your long distance calls. This is Pacific Telephone's control room where we keep watch on long distance circuits. The big display board shows exactly what the situation is on some 15,000 of them here in the Pacific West. If storms or disasters cause trouble along a certain route, teletypes flash the word. The control room quickly issues orders setting up alternate routes... to keep your calls going through. And in times of unusually heavy calling over one route, extra circuits are assigned when possible. But whatever the emergency may be, alert telephone people all down the line know exactly how to handle it. That's one reason why, day in, day out, you enjoy good, fast telephone service... whether you're calling cross-country or just across town.
