Bitter Vote Fight Looms In New York

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York State Democratic convention opened Tuesday with Averell Harriman and Rep. Franklin D. Roosevelt locked in a bitter battle for the gubernatorial nomination.

New York City leaders, believed firmly in control of the majority of the 1,019 delegates, predicted Harriman would show under Roosevelt on the first ballot Tuesday night.

Roosevelt's embattled forces stuck to their claim that the son of the late President had a unique chance to capture the nomination. The winner will face U.S. Sen. Irving M. Ives, scheduled to be nominated by the Republicans Wednesday at Syracuse.

State Chairman Richard H. Bulch, a Harriman supporter, tore into Gov. Thomas E. Dewey in his opening address. Bulch called Dewey a "virtual dictator" and indicated that one of the basic issues of the election campaign would be the difference in political philosophy between the major parties.

He said the Democratic Party strove to fulfill "needs, desires and goals of all the people." From the Roosevelt camp came word that the congressman was hopeful of capturing a sizeable chunk of the 513 New York City delegates, most of whom are reported committed to Harriman.

Roosevelt forces were talking about picking up 40 of Brooklyn's 180 delegates and biting into the Bronx, Queens and Manhattan delegations.

The Harriman campaign managers stood on their prediction that the former mutual security administrator would roll up from 750 to 755 votes on the first ballot.

Federal Land Uses; Water Rights Discussed At Meet

Problems created by the federal ownership of non-taxable lands in counties of Southern Oregon and Northern California and other questions pertinent to future development of the Klamath Basin were discussed by representatives of the county courts of six Southern Oregon counties and one Northern California county at a meeting held here Tuesday.

The responsibility of the Fish and Wild Life Service toward the ultimate development of the basin and the question of water on Indian Reservation lands that could be affected by the Klamath Indian termination law, were also on the agenda.

Principal concern centered on the suggestion for partial return of highly productive federal lands within the perimeter of the counties to the county tax rolls. The alternate solution of payments by the federal a controlling agency to counties and cities in lieu of taxes was also discussed.

The need of legislation to determine water rights of Indian lands under the new Indian termination law was suggested by Forrest Cooper, Lakeview, legal counsel for the Interstate Association of Public Lands. It is probable that any questions that may arise regarding water on the reservation can be handled without legal action.

This conclusion was reached following a statement made by Lewis Stanley, engineer, Oregon Klamath River Commission, to the effect that the use of water for irrigation purposes supersedes all other water jurisdiction. County courts represented in Oregon and Modoc in California.

Members of the California and Oregon Klamath River commissions sat in on the meeting. Members of the river commissions convened for a separate meeting later in the day. James Stearns, Tulelake, Modoc County supervisor and member of the California Klamath River Commission was the spokesman for the Tulelake area where highly productive fish and wildlife refuge lands are located.

Future meetings will be held to work toward accomplishment of available water resources and to seek a solution to the federal land question.

Vandals Hit KF Apartment

Another attempt to burn out the occupants at 1110 Martin Street was made last night. Firemen were called to the apartment house shortly after 10 o'clock and extinguished the flames before damage was done.

One apartment in the building occupied by Deb L. Ryan and Mark Sellers has been the target for numerous vandals in recent weeks. Several times rocks have been thrown through the windows and broken into eggs taken from a refrigerator and thrown at the walls and ceilings. The furnishings were also torn up and broken.

On September 8 considerable damage was done to the building when a fire started in the doorway of a storeroom adjoining the apartments. Last night's blaze was started in the same place, city firemen reported. Another bottle was found near the scene last night, in it was a piece of paper with the words "Ha ha ha" inscribed. Smoke from the fire was discovered by an upstairs resident who notified the fire department.
