Greer Garson Stars In New Film About Frontier Life

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A few years ago, western actor Chill Wills was visiting on a set with Greer Garson, who remarked that she would like to appear in a picture with him.

"Shucks, Miss Garson," Chill replied, "That'd never happen. I make sagebrush pictures and you're in them carpet movies."

I've got news for Mr. Wills. Miss Garson is now off the carpets and out in the sagebrush. For her first independent picture after 15 years at MGM, she's doing "Strange Lady in Town," the story of a woman doctor who comes to a frontier town in New Mexico.

The regal redhead has just returned from a location in Tucson, where she rode horses and buckboards and sweltered in 112 degrees in the shade. I asked if that didn't make her long for the carpets and drawing rooms of MGM.

"Not at all," she smiled. "the location was rugged, but I asked for a change and I got it. This is the sort of a thing I have wanted to do for a long time. I think there's a great appeal in outdoor pictures now, especially to people who are cooped up in cities. It's a kind of escape for them."

She said the script grew out of a conversation she had two years ago with writer Frank Butler. She had become intrigued with the country around the New Mexico ranch of her husband, Buddy Fogelson. She had done some research into early New Mexican history and discussed it with Butler. Armed with some of her material, he went ahead with the story.

Oddly enough, the locations had to be done in Arizona.

"They looked for places in New Mexico," Miss Garson explained, "but they found that the Indian pueblos were bristling with TV aerials. The towns all looked too modern for the period—around 1870."

If the location was rugged on her, she didn't show it. She was a colorful sight with her tangerine hair and lavender costume, and she glowed with enthusiasm about her new career as an independent. She made it clear that she would keep active.

"I think an actor should work," she reasoned. "A musician can refrain from making appearances and go on practicing. But an actor needs to continue working or he goes stale.

"I've always thought it was a shame when some of our great talents are kept from work, Like Ronald Colman. There is no one to equal his charm. Though we will soon be seeing him on TV in 'The Halls of Ivy,' he has been inactive on the screen, and it's a shame.

"Another one is Mario Lanza. I don't know him personally, but I love his voice. I don't care if he is fat. He has a great voice and it should be heard."

She explained that this reasoning of hers caused her to be in some of the "clinkers" she made at MGM.

"Sometimes I would go to the bosses before a picture and tell them that I personally wouldn't put a nickel in it," she said.

"But I said I would do the picture if they had the faith to put their money in it. I felt it was more important for an actor to be seen at least once a year, if only in a poor picture, than to be on suspension and not appear on the screen."

Umpqua River Closure Ends

The emergency angling closure on the north Umpqua River which went into effect on August 3, has been lifted.

A portion of the river beginning at the highway bridge below Winchester Dam and extending downstream to a point near Davis Rapids was closed to protect concentrations of game fish below the California-Oregon Power Company Dam while repairs were being made.

Repairs have been completed and the fish ladder over the dam is again operative, thus the closure is no longer in effect.

The next meeting will be October 25 at the home of Gertrude Tolle. Margaret Strode will review "The High and the Mighty."

Game Commission Closes Stream

At the request of the Fish Commission of Oregon, an emergency angling closure has been put into effect on Gnat Creek in Clatsop County.

The closure will extend from the fish commission racks to a point 200 feet downstream and prohibits all angling.

The Oregon Game Commission enacted the closure to prevent the depletion of game fish concentrations caused by the racks placed across the stream. The racks have been installed to stop migrating salmon and thus obtain eggs to be used in the Gnat Creek hatchery of the fish commission.

The closure will be in effect until rescinded.

New Brazilian Era Predicted

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—Carlos Lacerda, a key man in the events leading to President Getulio Vargas' ouster and suicide, says Brazilians now have a feeling of confidence and hope, after 25 years of uncertainty.

Lacerda, 40, is editor of Tribuna Da Imprensa, a longtime foe of Vargas. An attempt to kill the editor set off the sequence which led Vargas to quit the presidency under pressure Aug. 24. A few hours later Vargas shot himself. Joao Cafe Filho, the vice president, took over the presidential term expiring in January, 1956.

The editor summed up his views on the eve of next Sunday's congressional elections. He himself is a candidate in Rio De Janeiro, and opinion polls predict his victory.

He observed:

"After a quarter century of distress and doubts, of ups and downs from dictatorship to semi-dictatorship, corruption, bribes and dirty affairs, we now have for a year a constitutional government which has given back to the people a feeling of confidence and hope.

"Of course we are going to have elections still under the pressure of recent corruption and under the heavy weight of emotion caused by the former President's suicide—an act which was a blow to all of us. His former oligarchy is trying to exploit this emotion in association with the Communists, trying to Peronize Brazil through those disturbing factors, trying to exploit the body of Vargas in efforts to gain power again in the elections."

Lacerda said Communists and extreme leftist laborites will win seats "but not enough to make Brazil go back to some kind of Vargas regime."

FLOODS

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP)—Swollen by torrential rains, flooding rivers rampaged through the towns and banana plantations of northwest Honduras Wednesday. The U.S. embassy messaged for American help in coping with the threat of "national disaster."
