Medical Effort Launched To Prevent Poisoning Of Children In Home Mishaps

By FRANK CAREY AP Science Reporter

CHICAGO (AP)—A new medical effort is being organized against a potential danger in your own home—the accidental poisoning of children by swallowing common household materials like furniture polish and bleaching agents.

Spearheaded by a group of Chicago doctors who have set up a "poisoning control center," similar projects are operating or being developed in Boston, Cincinnati, New York, Phoenix and Washington, D.C., the American Academy of Pediatrics was told today.

The idea is to have a systematic centrally controlled network within a city whereby quickest action can be taken in treating a poisoned child and follow-up steps can be taken to try to prevent possible recurrences of the same emergency. Dr. Edward Press of the University of Illinois and several associates described the Chicago program in a scientific exhibit at the AAP's 23rd annual meeting. Dr. Robert B. Mellins of the U.S. Public Health Service, who is participating in the Chicago program, supplied further details.

They said the commonest substances swallowed among 375 children treated for poisoning in the last year in Chicago were aspirin; petroleum products such as kerosene; rodent killers and insecticides; bleaching agents; and turpentine.

With the Chicago Board of Health acting as a clearing house for information and follow-up action, some 20 hospitals in the Chicago area have been supplied with an 80-page manual outlining poisonous constituents of various household materials and the most recent approved methods of treatment.

Individual doctors who might be house-called on a poison case can call a "Poison Control Committee" member at the Board of Health or one of the participating hospitals if he needs help.

"We're prepared," Dr. Mellins told a reporter, "to contact the manufacturer of a given household product in case its chemical constituents—and hence possible antidotes—may not be immediately known.

"We would like," he added, "to stimulate clearer labeling on various products and, in the case of the more dangerous substances, precautionary warnings which would help remind parents of the potential danger of carelessly placing such products within reach of children."

Alaska Volcano Erupts Again

SEATTLE (AP)—An airlines pilot said here Tuesday night a volcano in Alaska's Katmai group, 10 miles northwest of Kodiak, has erupted shooting sparks and smoke eight miles into the air.

Landing here after a flight in the area Capt. Joe Stevens of Pacific Northern Airlines said he was unable to determine whether the eruption came from Mt. Katmai or Mt. Trident.

Mt. Katmai, on the Alaska Peninsula, erupted Feb. 15, 1953, sending a column of smoke 30,000 feet in the air and showering nearby valleys with ash.

Nearby Mt. Trident erupted a few days later.
