"But, Daddy, how can my little savings account help build a school?"

"Because the money you deposit is combined with lots of other savings accounts, which, added together, make enough to build big projects. You see, Joan, The First National Bank doesn't just put your money in a vault and keep it for you. The people at your bank see to it that the money is kept in use . . . for a great number of worthwhile things."

"But how do they use it to build a school?"

"Here's how it works. The First National loans the money from all these combined savings to the school board by buying their bonds at reasonable interest rates. The school board then has the money to build the school. From taxes collected they pay back the money to the bank over a period of years."

"Is that how the bank can loan money to us . . . like when we bought our house?"

"Yes, and to businesses, county road departments, and all sorts of places where credit is needed. I just looked over the latest statement of condition published by First National. It shows that our bank has more than 80 million dollars working now through its investment in state, county, and municipal bonds. Many of those dollars were used to build schools.

"So you see, when you have a First National savings account, you're helping to build all sorts of things in Oregon."

Attending from the Klamath Falls public schools will be Andrew Loney Jr., director of music education, twice a past president of this organization; Ruth Lobaugh, elementary vocal supervisor; Freeman Yount, instrumental teacher in the grade schools and LaMar Jensen, band director at Klamath Union High School, who will leave after the games Friday evening.

OPEC Claims Discrimination

PORTLAND (AP) — The AFL Oregon Public Employes Council charged Wednesday that some state agencies are discriminating against unions by favoring the independent Oregon State Employes Assn.

Leo Butt of the AFL group) asked the Board of Control to hold a hearing on the matter. He said the discrimination consisted of literature, favoring the independent association, given new employes of the Eastern Oregon Hospital at Pendleton, the State Tuberculosis Hospital at The Dalles and the Tax Commission.

Butts said that despite board assurances to the AFL last summer that there would be no discrimination, he twice has called infractions to the board's attention.
