

TWO-TONED HAIR is increasing in popularity, encouraged, no doubt, by the variety of new products that make it so easy to streak-it or tip-it-yourself. New in this list of glamour preparations is Nestle Streaks 'n Tips, an aerosol container filled with a glittering gold or a silver mist. One press of the button and your hair is delicately sprayed with gold or silver. A special slotted shield makes it easy to apply the spray exactly where you wish and nowhere else. A third shampoo shiks Streaks 'n Tips right out of the hair. A third color in the Colorwand line (a creme hair coloring in a lipstick-type case) is copper penny, which also shampoos out without difficulty. The Nestle line is handled locally.

Combat Dry Skin

Day after day, countless women are inadvertently drying out their skins, or further contributing to their dry skin problems just because they use the wrong make-up, according to the Max Factor Make-Up Studio in Hollywood. At night they may diligently try to correct this problem through the use of special creams and lotions, yet they immediately undo any beneficial results they may have achieved from the creams by wearing make-up that actually dries out the skin faster than nature does.

Practically every type of make-up blots up the natural moisture from your face, causing the skin surface to dry out and become scaly and flaked. Unless something is done to stop this process, ugly crow's feet, scaly pores, creases in the neck, hard lines between the nose and mouth and facial wrinkles invariably result, making any woman appear years older than she should.

Recognizing these facts, Max Factor, Hollywood's noted beauty authority, devoted two full years to creating a completely new type of make-up that would not dry the skin. The result was his famous Pan-Stik, which adds freshening, rejuvenating moisture to the skin.

Because it actually creams the skin while it beautifies, keeping it soft and smooth and protecting it from the ravages and drying effects of the sun, wind, dust and cold, it is an all-day beauty treatment.

Scent Furs Properly

With Paris designers decreeing a touch of fur on everything from sweaters to the "little black dress," it's time to think about the right way to perfume our furs. For furs have the wonderful quality of retaining perfume, even though they may hang in the closet for months.

From The Fragrance Fountain comes some good advice. "First of all, there's a difference between perfuming oneself and perfuming one's furs, for instructions for the two are just the opposite," states Mrs. Kay Jameson. "In applying perfume on yourself, it's important to spray it directly on the skin, whereas with furs, since they are of a very delicate nature and discoloration is one of their enemies, it's absolutely necessary that one doesn't spray or apply perfume directly on the fur itself.

"Instead, liberally spray your favorite perfume on the lining of your fur coat, jacket or stole. Then when you've donned your furs, spray a mist of perfume in the air and walk through the fragrant moisture. The fragrance will cling to your furs and scent them beautifully.

"What types of perfume are especially suited to furs? Although you have heard that the heavier fragrances, the one with a rich, lasting quality, are preferred, you'll find that all fragrances, even the very light florals, are beautifully sympathetic to fur. On furs that are designed for evening wear only, you may want to wear a more sophisticated fragrance such as an oriental, semi-oriental or modern blend. And for the more casual furs, you might like the lighter - in - scent florals.

"For the very blonde or white furs that are so much in vogue now, such as white fox, ermine or blonde beaver, it is especially important not to spray perfume directly on the fur because of the danger of discoloration. When not in use, spray the lining of the coat and place sachet pillows in the pockets or attach them to the hanger on which your furs are stored."
