Drunk Driving Sentence Given

Nelson Larson, 54-year-old ranch worker, was sentenced to nine months in Rocky Butte Jail in Multnomah county late Monday after he was found guilty of drunk driving by District Judge D. E. Van Vactor.

Bolting voiceways together. One of our newest money savers is a special casing (above) which fits over splices in plastic covered cable. We simply bolt it together and seal the edges and ends with a special compound. This protects the splice against air and moisture. With this casing, plastic covered cable can be put in faster and at even lower cost.

Turkey Firm Ships Birds

Trucks operated by the Kerr Gifford Division of Cargill, Inc., of Minneapolis, Minnesota, with operations at Merrill, have been shuttling from Merrill to Salem for the past several weeks with turkeys raised by the company at Malin and Klamath Falls.

Fifty thousand Bronze birds have been transported in specially built crates stacked on a flat-bed truck to the company's Salem killing plant. The modern killing plant built at Merrill several years ago was not operated this year.

Birds were processed at Salem with a new scalded method which permits an earlier kill and expedient shipping to consumer points. The plant at Merrill was not equipped for this operation. The scalded method also cuts down cost of production and allows birds to reach distant markets when prices are at their peak.

Approximately 1400 hens and 800 toms were transported at one load. The hauling will be completed before Thanksgiving, according to Louis Stewart, assistant manager of the Kerr Gifford Division office at Merrill.

The output of birds this year was the largest in the history of the plant which was acquired some years ago from Shuck Brothers. The birds were bought as day-old poults from Willamette Valley turkey farms, brooded in the old Liskey plant at Malin and finished for killing at Swan Lake.

Bruce Hagerman, rated one of Oregon's experts on turkey raising, has been in charge of local operations.

Oregon Gas Tax Request Blocked

SALEM (AP)—The Oregon Highway Commission failed Monday to get sponsorship for its proposed boost of 2 cents in the state gasoline tax, but is expected to go directly to the Legislature with the request.

The Legislative Interim Committee on Highways at its Monday meeting refused to back the increase because, members said, they wanted to get a look first at the Eisenhower administration's proposed 50 billion dollar road building program.

One committee member, State Sen. Charles W. Bigner, of La Grange, voted to approve the 2-cent boost which would put the state tax at 8 cents a gallon. The federal government adds a tax of 2 cents.

R. H. Baldock, highway commission engineer, said it doesn't make any difference what federal highway program is set up, Oregon must have the added money that a 2-cent extra gas tax would bring.

To meet minimum needs for the next 15 years, he said, the state must spend 31 million dollars annually on its highways. Present available revenue runs to only 23 million a year. A 2-cent gas tax would bring in the needed 8 million, he said.

Without this minimum program, Baldock said the committee, "road building in Oregon will soon lose the advantage gained by the 72 million dollar bond expenditure (of the past five years) and slip rapidly behind in caring for current needs with current revenue. The critical highway deficiencies would become a serious handicap."

He told the committee that 15 years ago the average motorist, through license and gas tax, paid $37 annually for the care of highways and now pays only $17. Motorists, he said, should be agreeable to paying the extra money, which would put annual output at about $60 for license and tax, for the privilege of having better roads.

Guest Speaker Heard By C of C

Harry Lintz, district manager of the Pacific Northwest Division, Chamber of Commerce of the United States, was guest speaker at a special luncheon meeting Monday noon in the Vienna Hotel attended by chamber of commerce members and interested persons in the community.

Preceding showing of a movie on the American business system, Lintz explained briefly the U.S. chamber's program of work in national affairs, economic study groups, business-education day and film program.

He stressed statistics of a Princeton research program which shows employer's place opportunity, recognition, participation and security above wages. "People are the real king makers and the ballot box is their castle," Lintz said in emphasizing the importance of selling America's business system to the people in general.

He illustrated various methods by which business can explain its story and praise business-education day as one way. The film, "It's Everybody's Business," which followed dramatizes the American business system which, built on a firm foundation of freedoms, has given America the highest living standards in the world.

Plans are being made to make this film available through the local chamber of commerce to schools, organizations, labor groups, service clubs, parent-teacher associations, etc. Lintz will return to Klamath Falls following a meeting in Washington, D.C. next month. In addition to a session with Attorney William Ganong, Jr. local head of the National Affairs Committee, Lintz will speak at service club meetings.

Church Plans Special Film

"This Gathering Storm," the film story of the impending storm breaking over Asia as seen through the eyes of Dr. Bob Pierce in his missionary journeys, will be shown at First Church of the Nazarene, corner Garden and Martin Streets, Wednesday evening, November 24, at 7:45 p.m.

The film has been typed by Evangelist Billy Graham and other Sunday School workers and evangelists as the most comprehensive study of missions ever released to the public. The viewer is taken along the Korean battleground with Evangelist Graham preaching to U.N. troops and Korean refugees to India and the shores of Japan. Actual scenes of snake charmers, Hindu religious rites, the sacrificing of a bull in religious ceremony are contrasted with thousands listening to the preaching of Dr. Pierce.

Narrated by Dr. Pierce, "This Gathering Storm" is in natural color and is 65-minutes long. The Rev. Wesley Crist, pastor of First Church of the Nazarene, invites everyone to attend. There is no admission charge.

Vocal Program To Be Heard

Two Salvation Army captains will present a program of vocal and instrumental music Wednesday evening, November 24, at 7:45 p.m. in the Salvation Army chapel.

The musicians, Captain A. Forsberg and Captain L. Sandberg, will sing both English and Swedish numbers and will present instrumental selections on the piano accordion, lute and piano. There will be no admission charge; however, a free will offering will be received. The entire family, including infants, is invited to enjoy the evening of music.

NEW INSTRUMENT
BONN, Germany (AP)—West German scientists have produced a simple, portable instrument for measuring radioactivity, the interior ministry announced Tuesday. The instrument, estimated to cost less than four dollars when mass produced, is to be issued to German civil defense officials.

State Heart Group Plans Campaign

One aim of the American Heart Association is to prevent heart disease through proper education on care of the heart. To carry out this aim, the Oregon Heart Association has planned meetings throughout the state.

Mrs. John Martin, local representative to the OHA board of directors, has announced a joint community meeting of residents of Merrill, Henley and Melin on Monday, November 29, at 8 p.m. in the Merrill High School gym.

Mrs. Martin pointed out that an extensive education program is aimed at conquering heart disease. The association expects to prevent many cases of heart disease and assist victims in the care of their hearts.

"Informed persons know now that they can live and work with their heart trouble, and this knowledge gives them hope and courage," Mrs. Martin stated. She credited the work of AHA through which parents today are less afraid of rheumatic fever, which accounts for more than 70 per cent of heart disease in children. Although it is the most handicapping of any childhood disease, it can be prevented.

To educate local residents to the facts of rheumatic fever and heart disease, the local OHA is now prepared to offer the community a program of service and public education. Plans include emphasis on four areas: rheumatic fever, general heart education, chesty program and recreational therapy. Films, pamphlets and lectures by local physicians will be used to carry out the program.

At Monday's meeting in Merrill a film on rheumatic fever, "Seeing Them Through," will be shown and Dr. Don Rice, local pediatrician, will discuss the disease. The Klamath Heart Committee includes representatives of the medical profession, public health service, schools, parent-teacher associations, service clubs, parents and relatives of people with heart disease and various interested community leaders.

Annexation Election, Jet Base Discussed By Council

The airport, a road in Riverside Addition and the annexation election set the stage for a busy council meeting Monday night in the city council chambers.

City council passed on the first and second readings an ordinance pertaining to a contract with the Air Force for reactivation of the local airport as a jet interceptor base. The ordinance approves a memorandum of understanding formulated last Friday by military and city officials and authorizes signing of the memorandum by the city.

Because next Monday is not a regular council meeting night (the fifth Monday), the ordinance cannot be passed until December 9, however, council at last night's meeting passed a resolution declaring its intention to sign the ordinance.

The memorandum of understanding, when signed by the military and the city, will be the basis of a 90-year lease to be drawn. Among provisions to the city in the initial agreement, (which will be the first legal document from the Air Force to the city) is the city's right to continue a present contract with Carlson Products Corp., which operates at the airport.

Another section provides that no planes can operate on the airport without two-way radios. Tony Steinbock, Klamath Aircraft Service, who was present at council, objected on behalf of individual crop dusters. Russ Avery, airport manager, expressed the thought that such operators could probably make a separate agreement with the base commander, as was the case when the airport was Navy-run.

A delegation of about 16 persons requested a report from council on the Riverside road. About a month ago residents of the community insisted that, as taxpayers, they had a right to a road to the top of the hill. City, county and school officials have worked out a plan to grade and gravel a road from Riverside to Rogers.

On the delegation's request, council authorized a letter be written showing the city's good intentions so that residents of the area can raise $1000 among themselves for construction of the road. The city, when the county has finished its 500 feet, and when the area residents have raised their $1000, will do its part, some 800 to 1000 feet. This leaves about 500 or 600 feet the responsibility of the school district.

Joe Casey, 1525 Austin, reported opposition met in a pre-election canvass of Sunnyland and the public housing units area, proposed for annexation to the city. Casey assured council that residents of Austin wanted to be annexed; opposition was coming from residents of the housing project.

Mayor Paul Landry reminded him the city had "more cards to play" and referred to a previous statement that the city cannot be forced to provide sewer service to residents outside the city. The annexation election polls are open until 8 o'clock this evening at 1401 Nimitz.
