THE LONG WAIT for Santa is a good picture to record for the family album. But it can be posed early enough to be made into personal Christmas cards from the family.

Endless List Of Gifts May Be Given For Hope Chest

Are there any names on your Christmas list of bachelor girls who live alone or girls who are filling their hope chests? If the answer is in the affirmative, your gift-finding worries are small.

For the young girl filling a hope chest, for instance, your choice of appropriate gifts would seem to be almost endless. There are hundreds of items, large and small, that she'll need in her future home. And receiving some of them now will probably bring more pleasure than a gift for her person alone.

One good choice is a bedspread, which she'll use and treasure for years. But before you go out to buy one, be sure to check with her parents or friends to learn her favorite color and whether she already has one. Ditto for similar presents.

The young prospective bride always has definite plans regarding her future home's decor. You'll have to meet their requirements or the gift will prove a dud and later must be exchanged.

A popular present always is a set of cooking utensils. Several leading firms, such as Farberware, Ecko and Wear-Ever, now offer low-cost "starter sets." These contain all pots and pans needed for everyday meal preparation, and later may be expanded by adding matching pieces.

Other favorites of hope chest fillers are sheets, pillow cases, towels, linens, bureau scarves, table cloths, trousseau clothing and similar items. But don't think for a second that the item must be so small that it fits inside the hope chest. Also sure to be welcomed are such things as small appliances, canister sets and candlestick holders.

The bachelor girl who doesn't live home may be filling a hope chest also. But whether she is or isn't, the fact that she lives alone or with friends suggests some specialized needs which adapt themselves well to Christmas presents.

For one thing, she has to cook—and because she holds a business job, she does so as fast as she can. If your budget will stretch that far, one of the portable cooking appliances will speed her chore considerably.

A good example is the deep fat fryer, which cooks everything from soups to roasts and does it extremely quick. In the infrared roaster, an entire meal can be cooked at once. Other suitable gifts are portable mixers and sandwich grills, irons and pop-up toasters.

Since the bachelor girl usually works, she has to maintain a neat appearance. A hair dryer or massager is sure to be used many times. A new electric shaver by Remington, especially made for women, will remove unsightly leg hair.

Once you've started thinking, the list of suitable presents will lengthen to fill many pages. High on the roll-call of favorites, or course, are items to brighten her living quarters.
