KF Merchants Hold Meeting

Lorin Campbell, manager of the F. W. Woolworth Company here, was appointed chairman of the nominating committee for the Klamath Merchants Association by the president, Keith Moon, at the merchants' December meeting Monday noon at the Willard Hotel.

To serve with Campbell are Loren Calhoun of Calhoun's Floor Coverings; Sid Elliot, J. C. Penney Company manager; and Al Hatton of Shaw Stationery Company. The committee will make nominations for election of 11 directors, representing 11 categories of business. The directors will serve for the year 1955 and will elect officers from the directorship. It was announced by Moon that Santa Claus will be on downtown streets, with candy treats for the kiddies, from noon until 9 p.m. the next two Fridays, from noon until 5 p.m. the next two Saturdays; and from noon until 9 p.m. during the week prior to Christmas.

Relatives Portray Doctor Sheppard As Good Husband

By RELMAN MORIN
CLEVELAND (AP)—A picture of a serene and happy marriage was emerging today from the testimony of Dr. Samuel Sheppard's relatives, fighting to free him of the charge that he murdered his wife, Marilyn.

They have been taking the witness stand, one after another, in his defense. Their testimony hits at the heart of the state's case against the handsome, dark-haired osteopath—the charge that his motive for murder arose from his relations with other women. Sheppard's story is that someone broke into his home and battered his wife to death as she lay in bed in an upstairs room while he took a nap on a couch downstairs. He says the killer struck him down when he ran to help her, severely injuring him in the struggle.

Step by step, Sheppard's lawyers have been building a defense, based in large part on a description of his married life as told by members of the family. They picture him as a devoted husband and Marilyn as a happy wife, mother of one child and expecting another.

Art Official Reveals Stunt
LONDON (AP)—Sir Gerald Kelly, president of Britain's Royal Academy of Art, disclosed last night that he once stole one of the late King George VI's art masterpieces—and replaced it with a fake. It was only a stunt to prove it could be done, Kelly told the audience at an art exhibition. He later returned the work, a painting by the 16th-century German artist Hans Holbein.

Kelly said the incident occurred in 1950 when the King lent his Windsor Castle collection of Holbeins for a London exhibition. "I got into a panic in case one was stolen," Kelly said. To find out whether such a theft would be easy, he said, he had "a large woman" smuggle in a reproduction of one of the paintings under her dress, had two children divert attention with an outcry in an adjoining room and deftly switched the paintings. "The whole operation took 27 seconds," he said. "After that the Holbeins were locked in the cellar every night. And we never did tell anybody of our little experiment."

there was a discussion of such a possibility between Marilyn and me. It was held in his former office, he said. He fixed the date exactly—Aug. 10, 1950. Did Dr. Sam know of this conversation? "I mentioned it to him some time later," the witness said. "How long after?" "I couldn't say exactly," he replied. "Possibly two weeks." "No further questions," the prosecution lawyer snapped, leaving this point with the jury. The other Sheppard brother, Dr. Richard and his wife, Dorothy, were scheduled to testify today. And Chief Defense Counsel William Corrigan indicated he may call the accused man's son, Chip, as a later witness.
