Lucky Ace of Spades

"It's All in the Cards" is a clever, new booklet about playing cards, offered in exchange for an Ace of Spades from any old deck of playing cards.

Send the Ace of Spades to Association of American Playing Card Manufacturers, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, New York, with request for the booklet.

As the title implies, the booklet is about playing cards. It answers such questions as: "What card game is won more often by children than by adults?" "Did anybody ever actually look like the Queen of Hearts?" "What card game does President Eisenhower enjoy even more than his round of golf?"

It will not tell you how to execute an end play in Contract Bridge or how to win at Poker. Instead, it is designed to remind you of the fun, the relief from care and worry and the opportunity for family participation that a deck of cards can provide.

"It's All in the Cards" traces the history of playing cards and tells you how the early Persians played their favorite card games with slender circular slices of ivory which they had decorated with symbols of the seasons.

You read that famous monarchs of the Middle Ages were the models for the earliest face cards.

Another section in the booklet tells how to play Concentration, an aptly named card game for both children and adults and also suggested ways to use cards in keeping the children happy on rainy days or when they are ill at home.
