Authorities Tighten Rules On Credit To Control Boom

NEW YORK (AP) — Business held to a scorching pace this week. The administration, scenting an inflationary threat, tightened the screws on credit. The new squeeze on credit means that you'll find it harder—and more expensive—to borrow money. That's the case whether you plan to buy a car "on time," get a mortgage on a house, or borrow millions from the bank for inventory accumulation. Announced intention of the credit move: To keep the boom from getting out of hand, and to forestall another postwar round of runaway price increases. One top administration official put it this way: "The business boom is getting pretty exuberant. It's the consensus of the economic and financial side of the administration that the government should exert some effort to keep it orderly." The exuberance of the boom was blatantly apparent almost anywhere you wanted to look. Electric power output at latest count was the highest for any week in history; automobile production, although down from the previous week, was still a good 40 per cent greater than a year ago. Soft coal production in the latest week was up nearly 28 per cent from last year; freight carloadings were up 16 per cent. Dun & Bradstreet said retail trade smashed all mid-summer records. There were other boom signals. Chrysler reported record sales for the first half-year and a four-fold jump in profits. The nation's 126 biggest railroads disclosed that their combined earnings for the first six months were up 79 per cent from a year ago. The First National City Bank of New York listed up the first-half profits of 734 major corporations. The tally showed a 31 per cent gain over their combined first-half earnings last year. Construction boomed as never before. The Commerce and Labor Departments reported that building activity in the first seven months this year rocketed to an all-time high of more than 23 billion dollars. Highways, homes, stores and office buildings set the pace. Pressures generated by the stepped-up pace of business made themselves felt in two familiar forms: shortages and rising prices. Price hikes were announced by producers of aluminum, steel, scrap, auto tires, Canadian crude oil. Meanwhile you could find plenty of exuberance among consumers—they were buying at a record clip, and going into lock to do it. The Federal Reserve Board reported that installment debt skyrocketed in June to an unprecedented high of nearly 25 billions. On-the-cuff buying of new automobiles accounted for most of the rise.

Smoke Causes False Alarm

YREKA — A diesel locomotive let off an extra burst of smoke Tuesday morning and caused a false fire alarm to be turned in to the U.S. Forest Service headquarters here. When investigating firemen, who received the alarm at 8:10 a.m., arrived on the scene east of Tennant, they found that a locomotive being used to tear up the track of a former Long-Bell Lumber Company railroad had given off extra heavy exhaust when starting work in the morning. The locomotive had carboned up during the night, and the extra smoke appeared to a passerby to be a fire. The locomotive was running without any excess smoke by the time firemen arrived.

Fire Levels Ranch Shed

Fire in a large tin storage shed on the Keith Rice ranch in Langell Valley was discovered by Nancy Risse, 8, about 6 p.m. Friday. Nancy's parents Mr. and Mrs. Walter Risse live in the house on the ranch. The shed was used for tool and machinery storage and a large caterpillar-type tractor which was usually stored there escaped destruction as it had been in use for plowing and was parked in the field. The fire totally destroyed the shed. No estimate of damage cost or insurance coverage was available at press time. Mr. and Mrs. Rice, owners of the ranch, credited quick work by the Bonanza city and rural fire trucks and cooperation of neighbors who rushed to the scene with saving the house and other nearby buildings from destruction.

Kenneth Roberts Death Told

CHILQUIN — Kenneth Roberts, longtime Klamath County resident, died in Carlsbad, New Mexico, Tuesday evening, July 28, according to word received locally by close friends. The body was shipped to Severy, Kansas, his home town, for burial. He leaves his widow, Gladys. Roberts had been in very poor health during the past few years. The Roberts had moved to Chilquin in the late 1920's where they owned and operated the only theater in town. It was a large wooden structure at the southwest end of Main Street. A few years later they moved to a brick building a block closer to the center of town and until the late 1940's had a thriving business. They made their home in a place on Chilquin Heights which they had purchased from the George Freids and which is now owned by Forest Freid. Poor health caused the Roberts to sell the Gem Theater to Alan Prescott about five years ago and they moved to Klamath Falls where they stayed for nearly two years before moving south for Robert's health.
