

School Men Meet, Talk Job Roster

School boards of District No. 1 (elementary) and District No. 2 (Klamath Union High School) met Monday night in the high school for joint and individual action on staff appointments, school building plans, consideration of student and bus insurance and other pertinent business.

The resignation of Mary Frances Kirkland, fifth grade teacher at Roosevelt, was accepted by the elementary board. Mrs. Kirkland is the wife of Art Kirkland, O.T.I. assistant football and head basketball coach at O.T.I. who has resigned. Shirley Van Lee, wife of a new O.T.I. coach, graduate of Monmouth College of Education, who has taught at Coos Bay, was elected to a teaching position in the grade schools.

The board of K.U.H.S. announced appointment of Stephen Stone to the vacancy left by Don McKenzie as director of instrumental music. McKenzie moves to a new assignment as orchestra leader and string instructor. Stone, a former member of the K.U.H.S. faculty and has returned from service with the Navy. He is receiving his masters degree this week from the University of Oregon.

Mrs. Verla Lutz, secretary to Harold Ashley, clerk of the school board, was named deputy school board clerk in joint action of the two bodies.

Bids will be called for on August 5 by the elementary board for a one-classroom addition at Roosevelt school that will allow for access to the present state from the new room to be built between the present girl's gym and the auditorium.

A report on the legal moves for purchase of the new Mountain View elementary school site, allowed last spring by voters in a special election, was made. The state-owned property is partially occupied by a housing unit occupied by O.T.I. students. Tests for water can be expected to bring in a hot flow according to well drillers, familiar with the site.

A progress report on remodeling of the K.U.H.S. gymnasium, determined that the work being done by Pimmiger and Watkins, Klamath Falls contractors is expected to be completed in time for opening of the fall term of school.

Building plans for the proposed west wing addition to the high school building, being prepared by Howard Perrio, Klamath Falls architect, will be ready for publication by January 1, 1933.

In joint action the boards considered this year's proposals for student and athletic insurance and the clerk, Harold Ashley was instructed to call for school bus insurance and laundry bids.

CHICAGO GRAIN
CHICAGO (AP)—Firmness in wheat and easiness in corn featured dealings in grains on the Board of Trade Tuesday.

The entire market sold off in early dealings. Then a good rally developed, sending everything except corn above the previous close. Part of these gains was lost before the finish.

Wheat led the rally while corn lagged. Buying in wheat was attributed largely to short covering. There also was some support from export houses. Corn eased on the prospect of more moisture in the Midwest.

City Councilmen Ponder Street Widths, Ruckus Over Firing, Viaduct

The width of city streets, the new South Sixth Street viaduct and a man who wanted his job back shared attention last night at the regular city council meeting in city hall.

Discussion of the streets centered on the notable lack of any fixed policy for designating their width, especially on arterial avenues.

The viaduct drew a step nearer realization when an ordinance was introduced to approve a new contract with the state highway department for its construction.

The man seeking his job back was Troy Morgan, 2440 1/2 White Avenue, who was working on a street repair crew.

When asked about the incident from his job recently, claimed that he was "hit and abused" by his job foreman, Paul Rock.

"Now I'm asking for my job back to shake me up," he said. "My feelings were hurt awful bad."

When asked about the incident this morning, Rock maintained that he "never laid a hand on him."

"I stepped down to show him how to do the job," said Rock. "When all of a sudden he grabbed me around the neck and started hitting me. I wanted to hit him, but being boss, I couldn't. I told him, I was going to sue him, but decided to let it go," he added.

After hearing Morgan's story as the council meeting, Mayor Paul Landry told him that the matter was under the jurisdiction of the city engineer's office.

Paul Hamblin, street foreman, who had fired Morgan after hearing of the incident, said that Morgan would not get his job back.

Meanwhile, the new contract with the state highway department for construction of the viaduct will be approved if the ordinance is passed for third reading next week.

The contract calls for a four-lane rather than two-lane overpass, as was first intended. The city had asked the state for a wider structure.

The state has stipulated that a specified one-way coupon must be effected by the city. This means traffic will be routed one-way south on South Sixth Street from Main Street to Kinlock Avenue, north on Commercial Street from Kinlock to Elm Avenue and on Seventh Street from Elm to Main and west on Elm from Seventh to South Sixth.

The city will be required to share the cost of signals required for the change, which is expected to be $28,000. The construction of the viaduct is a state project, due to cost in excess of $60,000. Bids probably will be advertised sometime in September.

When the job is completed the city will re-assume jurisdiction and control of the viaduct.

The discussion of city streets arose when Cal Payton, local home builder, asked the council if the city desired to widen Washburn Way from Eberlein to Darrow avenues.

Payton intends to pave the street 25 feet wide to serve home-owners at Old Orchard Manor, a housing project being built by him.

City Engineer E. A. Thomas said that 26 feet, which is the minimum standard set by the Federal Housing Administration, is too narrow for the street. He expects it to be a through street to the proposed East-side bypass, and thus recommended that the city pay for another 10 feet of width.

Councilman Murdo Morrison said that it is time to review the standards of the street.

"A study should be made to arrive at a fixed policy," he said. "The minimum should be more than 26 feet."

The council authorized Thomas to make an estimate of the cost involved in Washburn Way preparatory to obtaining the approval of the property owners to be affected.

In other business the council: Passed for first and second reading an ordinance to sign an agreement with the Oregon and California Klamath River commissions, county court, and Oregon State College for a three-year, $15,000, algebra study of Upper Klamath Lake. The city has budgeted $1,000 for each of the final two years of the study, which is to begin soon. The county will pay $4,000 each of these two years.

Heard income reports for July from various departments as follows: balls and fines, $3,562.50; building permits, $27.50, and plumbing permits, $67.50.

Mosquito Study On

City mosquitoes are being investigated today.

LaVerne Miller, supervisory sanitarian of the vector control program, state board of health, began a thorough study this morning of areas that breed the insects.

He is making the study at the request of the city council and city recreation department, both of whom have been concerned over the mosquito problem in Klamath Falls.

Miller will make his study and recommend to the city a method of extermination or control. His services are provided by the state board of health and are free of charge.

Making the survey with him are Max Braden, county health sanitarian, and Bert Slott, superintendent of Moore Park.

Wine Sale Arrest Made

A 45-year-old construction worker accused of selling a bottle of cheap wine to a 16-year-old boy pleaded not guilty Tuesday when arraigned before District Judge D. E. Van Vactor.

He was charged with selling liquor to minors.

The suspect, Orval Everett (Pat) Moore, was arrested by State Liquor Inspector Lawrence Lusk in what police describe as "wino village" on Broad Street.

A few hours before Moore was apprehended, police arrested his alleged customer in an intoxicated condition. The boy was turned over to juvenile authorities after he told Lusk that he bought a bottle of tokay wine from Moore for 89 cents.

The alleged bootlegger is slated for trial at 10 a. m. Monday. In lieu of $500 bail, Judge Van Vactor remanded him to the county jail.

Reservation Survey Slated

An economic study of the Klamath Indian Reservation is to be made soon by the Stanford Research Institute.

This was revealed today by Patrick M. Dowling, manager of the Pacific Northwest division of SRI, who is to be administrative supervisor of the project.

He and the two men who are to make the study, H. E. Robinson and John Nelson, met here with the three management specialists who were appointed by Secretary of Interior Douglas McKay to administer certain provisions of Public Law 587, the Klamath Indian termination act.

The institute is making the study at the request of the specialists in order to assist them in their duties as specified by the law. It is expected to take about three or four months.

The trip here today was made to discuss details of the survey with the specialists. The group went to Klamath Agency and Chiloquin on the reservation to talk with various officials.

Two of the specialists came from out of town to meet with the Stanford Research Institute team, W. L. Phillips lives in Salem, and Eugene Pavell is from Lakeview. The third is Tom Waiters of Klamath Falls.
