Soviet Composer Backs Exchanges

LONDON (AP)—Soviet composer Aram Khachaturian added his voice today to those suggesting musical exchanges between the United States and Russia.

In a message to the United States read over Moscow radio, the front-rank Soviet musician applauded American violinist Yehudi Menuhin's current efforts to arrange a visit to Russia in return for an American tour by master Soviet fiddler David Oistrakh.

"American symphony orchestras are said to be wonderful," Khachaturian's message said. "I should very much like to hear one of them in Moscow, say the one which Toscanini conducted (the Symphony of the Air, which recently toured the Far East).

"I would also like to have the American public hear our symphony orchestras," the composer said. "Discussions with American musicians might help us and they might prove beneficial to our American colleagues as well."
